Targeting Of Transfers In Developing Countries Review Of Lessons And Experience:

Targeting of Transfers in Developing Countries David Coady, Margaret E. Grosh, John Hoddinott, 2004 Drawing on a database of more than one hundred anti poverty interventions in 47 countries Targeting of Transfers in Developing Countries provides a general review of experiences with methods used to target interventions in transition and developing countries Written for policymakers and program managers in developing countries in donor agencies and in NGOs who have responsibility for designing interventions that reach the poor it conveys what targeting options are available what results can be expected as well as information that will assist in choosing among them and in their implementation Key messages are While targeting works the median program transfers 25 percent more to the poor than would a universal allocation targeting performance around the world is highly variable Means testing geographic targeting and self selection based on a work requirement are the most robustly progressive methods Proxy means testing community based selection of individuals and demographic targeting to children show good results on average but with considerable variation Demographic targeting to the elderly community bidding and self selection based on consumption show limited potential for good targeting There is no single preferred method for all types of programs or all country contexts Successful targeting depends critically on how a method is implemented The CD ROM includes the database of interventions an annotated bibliography PDF and Spanish and Russian translations of the book PDFs Targeting of Transfers in Developing Countries David Coady, 2004

Targeting social transfers in pastoralist societies: Ethiopia's productive safety net programme revisited Lind, Jeremy, Sabates-Wheeler, Rachel, Hoddinott, John F., Taffesse, Alemayehu Seyoum, 2018-09-20 In the Ethiopian highlands the Productive Safety Net Programme PSNP is a successful social safety net intervention in terms of both targeting and impact By contrast existing studies situated in the country's lowland Afar and Somali regions suggest that PSNP targeting is beset with difficulties This is deeply concerning given that these predominantly agro pastoral and pastoral areas have some of the country's highest levels of poverty and food insecurity and that there is an absence of viable livelihoods outside of pastoralism in these localities In this paper which draws on three rounds of household survey data from 2012 2014 and 2016 we show that there has been no meaningful improvement in targeting performance since 2010 We assess five explanations for this resources and under coverage the involvement of traditional leaders in targeting insufficient training attitudes of program implementers and transparency adducing that norms regarding fairness and a lack of transparency are the most likely explanations for continued poor targeting The PSNP experience calls into question the effectiveness of technocratic fixes as well as the appropriateness of targeting transfers in pastoralist societies How Relevant of Targeting to the Success of an Antipoverty Program? , Handbook Of International Food And Agricultural Policies (In 3 Volumes) , 2017-11-28 Handbook of International Food and Agricultural Policies is a three volume set that aims to provide an accessible reference for those interested in the aims and implementation of food and farm policies throughout the world The treatment is authoritative comprehensive and forward looking The three volumes combine scholarship and pragmatism relating academic writing to real world issues faced by policy makers A companion volume looking at the future resource and climate challenges for global agriculture will be published in the future Volume I covers Farm and Rural Development policies of developed and developing countries The volume contains 20 country chapters together with a concluding comprehensive synthesis of lessons to be drawn from the experiences of the individual countries Volume II examines the experience of countries with food policies including those dealing with food safety and quality and the responsibility for food security in developing countries The chapters address issues such as obesity nutritional supplements organic foods food assistance programs biotech food acceptance and the place of private standards Volume III describes and explains the international trade dimension of farm and food policies both at the bilateral and regional level and also the multilateral rules that influence and constrain individual governments The volume also looks at the steps that countries are together taking to meet the needs of developing and low income countries The volumes are of value to students and researchers interested in economic development agricultural markets and food systems Policy makers and professionals involved in monitoring and regulating agricultural and food markets would also find the volumes useful in their practical work This three volume set is also a suitable source for the general public interested in how their food system is influenced by government policies

Improving the targeting of fertilizer subsidy programs in Africa south of the Sahara: Perspectives from the Ghanaian experience Houssou, Nazaire, Asante-Addo, Collins, Andam, Kwaw S., 2017-03-17 This paper assesses whether fertilizer subsidy programs can be better targeted to resource poor farmers using the case of Ghana and proxy means test approaches Past fertilizer subsidy programs in the country have not been particularly targeted to the poor even as targeting poor and smallholder farmers has become key in the program implementation guidelines As a result many poor farmers have not benefited from past programs Our results show that targeting approaches based on proxy means tests that use the correlates of poverty to select beneficiary farmers can potentially improve the poverty outreach and cost effectiveness of Ghana's fertilizer subsidy programs Therefore we propose that the proxy means test approach should be considered for implementing Ghana's fertilizer subsidy programs first in a pilot project involving a few communities and later if found successful in a full scale program

Social Protection and Cash Transfers to Strengthen Families Affected by HIV and AIDS Michelle Adato, Lucy Bassett, 2012-01-01

Fuel and Food Price Subsidies - Issues and Reform Options International Monetary Fund. Fiscal Affairs Dept., 2008-08-09 Government price subsidies are pervasive in developed emerging and low income countries A subsidy is a form of government intervention resulting in a deviation of an actual price facing consumers and producers from a specified benchmark price Subsidies affect consumption and production patterns as well as the distribution of resources with important implications for the budget expenditure composition and long term growth They can and often do involve fiscal costs but not all affect government fiscal accounts in the same way Price subsidies have spillover effects onto prices and quantities in domestic regional or global markets This paper discusses the key issues and policy options in the reform of subsidies for fossil fuels and selected food commodities and their implications for the work of the Fund

Banking on Health Shiri Noy, 2017-09-18 This book addresses the puzzle of why the World Bank was unable to effect sweeping neoliberal health reforms in Latin America from the 1980s onward Through the use of quantitative regional data together with interview and archival data collected during fieldwork in Argentina Costa Rica Peru and Washington DC this book argues that the answer to this puzzle is twofold First the World Bank has not promoted a uniformly neoliberal monolithic agenda in health Second countries autonomy and capacity in this sector shape how the World Bank is involved in reforms Finally the book distinguishes neoliberal ends from means in health sector reform and traces changes in banking on health over time

Poor Places, Thriving People World Bank, 2011-01-10 Geographical differences in living standards are a pressing concern for policymakers in the Middle East and North Africa MENA Economies of agglomeration mean that production is most efficient when concentrated in leading areas So how can the region reduce spatial disparities in well being without compromising growth The solution to spatial disparities lies in matching the policy package to a lagging area's specific characteristics Key questions include is the lagging area problem really as serious as one thinks is it a problem of low economic opportunity or of poor human development are lagging area populations close enough to agglomerations to benefit from spillovers and is there manifest private investor interest Drawing on the World Bank s 2009 World Development Report Reshaping Economic Geography the book proposes 3 policy packages First all lagging areas can benefit from a level playing field for development and investment in people Geographic disparities in the policy environment are a legacy of MENA s history and gaps in human development are a major component of spatial disparities Smart policies for the investment environment health education social transfers and urban development can therefore close spatial gaps in living standards Second lagging areas that are close to economic agglomeration can benefit from spillovers provided that they are connected MENA s expenditure priority is not necessarily long distance primary connections but infrastructure maintenance and short distance connections such as rural roads and peri urban networks Public private partnerships can also bring electronic connectivity to lagging areas Third shifting regional development policy away from spatial subsidies towards the facilitation of cluster based growth will increase the chance of cost effective impacts The final chapter of the book examines the institutional prerequisites for effective spatial policy It argues that MENA s centralized sectoral structures are not always adapted to governments spatial development agendas and describes alternative institutional options
