Abstract

Reading is very important for students because their learning success is highly dependent on their reading comprehension. In order to read well, teachers must support learning with appropriate teaching methods. This study was a quantitative study to apply a quasi-experimental design to compare the TPRC strategy with Prezi and Grammar Translation Method to the first-year students in SMPN 1 Sutojayan. This study worked a quasi-experimental procedure of a non-randomized pre-test and post-test design. The analysis showed the result of this research that  $F(1,2415) = F(12,415)$ ,  $P(0.001) < 0.05$ . Therefore, the output obtained the experimental and control groups were significantly different. This means studies have shown significantly higher performance than those taught using GTM. It was concluded that TPRC strategy using Prezi was effective in teaching the reading of descriptive texts for junior high school.

Introduction

People utilize language to communicate ideas because they are social creatures. (Rahmasari & Rifa'i, 2022) This is the primary means of communication and is used to exchange information between them in social life. English has become a foreign language in Indonesia and is compulsory in Indonesian schools. It is very important that students learn English as a Foreign Language (EFL) properly. Good mastery makes it easier for people to communicate and get information. EFL (English as a Foreign Language) students must learn English so that they can use it when communicating with people from other English-speaking countries. This means how important it is for students to learn English as a means of communication. It also allows students to express their thoughts and feelings while studying English in class.

English as an international language plays an important role in many aspects of life including education, business, technology, and international relations. Due to its important role, it is included in the Indonesian curriculum. According to the syllabus, English subjects should cover her four skills: listening, speaking, reading, and writing. Listening is the active process of receiving and responding to speech. Speaking is the ability to create language and share your thoughts. Reading is the process by which a reader obtains meaning or knowledge from a text. Writing is the process of translating thoughts and ideas into letters. Of these skills, reading should succeed. Reading is the foundation of knowledge, so students should learn it. They must read before they can learn to write. If you listen before reading, you will have trouble understanding the words. Reading is a process that adds a lot of vocabulary, background knowledge, and new information. It will help you understand the purpose of the lesson.

One of the effective means for learning new language is by reading. There are several reading definitions. Different experts define reading differently. Additionally, term "read" needs to be explained to avoid confusion. "Reading means creating meaning over interaction with texts made up of symbols that represent language. Readers understand text based on the words they see on the printed page.
