Areas to address in your Teaching Philosophy:
My aspirations/goals/objectives: • as a teacher: (i.e., encourage mastery, competency, transformational learning, life-long learning, general skill transference of skills, meaningful learning, critical thinking, etc.) • for your students: (See examples above) *Describe and give example(s)
What methods will I consider to reach these goals/objectives? (i.e., your beliefs regarding learning theory and specific strategies you would use...such as case studies, group work, simulations, interactive lectures, learning/reading circles, etc. You might also include any new ideas/strategies you have used or want to try) *Describe and give example(s) of strategies/practices that you prefer.
How will I assess student understanding? (What are your beliefs about grading...norm-referenced or criterion-referenced? What different types of assessment will you use...traditional tests? Alternative assessments such as projects, papers, panels, presentation, etc.?) *Describe and give example(s)

The critical thinking movement is increasingly important in the philosophy of education Beginning from the generally accepted view that children should be taught to reason not simply to repeat what they have been told it tries to establish whether it is in fact possible to teach children a set of skills which add up to thinking Siegel here examines three major conceptions of critical thinking and then puts forward his own definition of the critical thinker as one who is appropriately moved by reasons He argues that critical thinking is a fundamental educational ideal and defends the ideal against charges of indoctrination

Chapters on science education and minimum competency testing highlight its practical implications for education policy and curriculum This book should be of interest to lecturers and students of education and philosophy Critical Reflections on Teacher Education Howard Woodhouse, 2022-09-28 Critical Reflections on Teacher Education argues that educational philosophy can improve the quality of teacher education programs in Canada the United States and the United Kingdom The book documents the ways in which the market model of education propagated by governments and outside agencies hastens the decline of philosophy of education and turns teachers into technicians in hierarchical school systems A grounding in educational philosophy however enables future teachers to make informed and qualified judgements defining their professional lives In a clear and accessible style Howard Woodhouse uses a combination of reasoned argument and narrative to show that educational philosophy together with Indigenous knowledge systems forms the basis of a climate change education capable of educating future teachers and their students about the central issue of our time Contributions to Education ,1928
