Relationship Between Teamwork and Team Performance

Mark Hwang,2019 Much interest exists in using Enterprise Resource Planning simulation ERPsim games to help students learn complex concepts involved in Enterprise Resource Planning ERP systems However little research has explored factors that contribute to team performance during an ERPsim game The current study investigated teamwork as a contributor to team performance in the context of a competition The research measured teamwork in five dimensions contributing to the team s work interacting with teammates keeping the team on track expecting quality and having relevant knowledge skills and abilities KSA Net income was the measure for team performance Participants also rated their satisfaction with their team Data from 62 student teams showed that all 5 teamwork dimensions had a positive correlation with net income Moreover all correlations were statistically significant except the relationship between keeping the team on track and net income Teams with relevant KSA were more likely to generate higher net income Expecting quality was the second most significant dimension followed by interacting with teammates and contributing to the team s work All five teamwork dimensions had a significant positive correlation with team satisfaction This research suggests that students will likely engage in good teamwork during a game if it is set up as a high stakes competition Additionally good teamwork will likely result in higher team performance and satisfaction The evidence should encourage more widespread adoption of ERPsim games as a means for teaching and assessing teamwork in addition to learning ERP concepts It's a Team Game Eleanor Martin,2015

Gaming and Shared Situation Awareness ,2000 The Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency DARPA is interested in exploring key factors that affect how teams particularly distributed teams develop what is called shared situational awareness SSA in an operational environment The DARPA Program Manager for the Wargaming the Asymmetric Environment program asked CNA to address these issues with subcontracting support from ThoughtLink Incorporated The focus of the project was to demonstrate how wargaming could be used as a testbed for conducting experiments to explore these key factors in team SSA The approach centers on the use of a simplified though not quite abstract game that allows us to tailor its design and mode of play to focus on the specific research items of interest In tie case of SSA we designed the game so that the bulk of the operational task faced by the players lies precisely in building a shared picture their SSA of their operating area This approach removes much of the potential confounding between SSA and game playing skill a problem that can be associated with measuring a team s performance in a game primarily by measuring its success in performing a specific operational game task such as winning the game This paper summarizes our survey of SA and SSA research and describes the game we used as our test bed and outlines our experiment and its results We conclude by discussing what we learner and speculating on where our research could lead in the future Team Games for Trainers Carolyn Nilson,1993-06-22 Effective team building through training games Carolyn Nilson s Training Games for Trainers reveals the Coordination Experience and Team Performance Cristian L. Dezso, Thorsten Grohsjean, Tobias Kretschmer, 2014 In cross functional teams team performance depends on how skillfully function managers carry out the cross function coordination of team members complementary expertise and activities In this paper we argue i that function managers coordination skills develop in part through the coordination experience gained from interacting with managers from other function ii that coordination experience has general and firm specific dimensions and iii that coordination experience leads to better team performance Using data on development teams in the electronic games industry we show that coordination experience and its general and firm specific components have a positive impact on the commercial success of electronic games and that this effect is robust to tests for omitted variables and reverse causality Our results have implications for the theory of learning and coordination in teams and for the strategy and practice of team design in project based organizations
