Morgan, 2014-08-15 This study examines how Lieutenant General Ulysses S Grant and the Army of the Potomac used tactical intelligence during the Overland Campaign Although Grant did not achieve his operational objective to defeat General Robert E Lee in the field tactical intelligence allowed him to continue the operational maneuver of the Army of the Potomac which later contributed to the eventual defeat of Lee in April of 1865 The examination of tactical intelligence in the Army of the Potomac covers the period of 4 May to 12 June 1864 It encompasses campaign planning and preparation as well as the battles of the Wilderness Spotsylvania Court House North Anna River and Cold Harbor The study combines a general contextual overview of the campaign and battles with a focused discussion and analysis of tactical intelligence collection and use The study also includes background discussion of influences that contributed to the lack of intelligence functions in the War Department and the Union Army the intelligence organizations that emerged in the Army of the Potomac and description of the primary forms and methods of tactical intelligence collection used during the campaign Strategy for Chaos Colin S. Gray, 2002 The remit of this study is to encourage further studies that make an honest and successful effort to achieve synergy between social science and history when analysing the impact of revolutions in military affairs RMAs Rosecrans' Staff At Chickamauga Major Robert D. Richardson, 2014-08-15 Illustrated with 23 maps and plans of the campaign and engagements at Chickamauga Probably the most unpredictable variable in the Fog of War next to leadership is the command and control process comprised of three components organizations process and facilities Organizations include the formulation of staffs by the commander to accomplish the mission Incorporated in the organization of the staffs are the roles responsibilities and functions Large Civil War armies like the Army of the Cumberland and the Army of the Tennessee required significant numbers of staff officers to support the armies logistically and to maneuver them operationally During the Campaign and Battle of Chickamauga these staff officers often played major roles and were instrumental in determining the outcome of the battle The roles and functions performed by these staff officers evolved through the history of conflict This study is an analysis of the roles responsibilities and functions of General Rosecrans staff prior to and during the Chickamauga campaign using lessons learned in comparison to current Army doctrine on command and control Primary sources for staff information on the Army of the Cumberland are the Official Records and actual telegrams from the staffs during this period Doctrinal manuals on senior level staffs did not exist therefore these staffs were composites of regimental and War Department staff positions and ad hoc positions The study uses evolving doctrine from Command and General Staff College that defines an outstanding staff as one that informs anticipates coordinates and executes the commander's guidance with enthusiasm and innovation This study concludes that Rosecrans staff was significant to the outcome of the Battle of Chickamauga Although none of the staff functions developed critical deficiencies during the campaign their inability to relieve the commander of administrative burdens compelled him to abandon the battlefield

After Clausewitz Antulio J. Echevarria (II), Antulio Joseph Echevarria, 2000 But Echevarria disputes this traditional view and convincingly shows that these theorists Boguslawski Goltz Schlieffen Hoening and their American and European counterparts were not the architects of outmoded theories In fact they duly appreciated the implications of the vast advances in modern weaponry as well as in transportation and communications and set about finding solutions that would restore offensive maneuver to the battlefield
