The New Politics of Gender

Equality Judith Squires, 2007-09-11 During the past decade governments around the globe have introduced institutional mechanisms to promote the advancement of women including measures to increase women's political participation rates and to incorporate women's interests into policy making Why have they done so How successful have these initiatives been What are the emerging agendas facing gender equality advocates now In The New Politics of Gender Equality Judith Squires examines the origins evolution and key features of three strategies that have been employed across the world in pursuit of gender equality quotas policy agencies and gender mainstreaming The author critically examines each strategy to see how far they transform political institutions and agendas and to what extent they lead rather to the assimilation of women in male defined structures Squires argues that a multi pronged approach drawing on democratic rather than technocratic strategies offers the best potential for advancing gender equality She highlights too the limitations of approaches that ignore inequalities among women and the challenges of developing equality initiatives to address multiple and cross cutting inequalities between groups Judith Squires is Professor of Political Theory University of Bristol She has written researched and published widely in the field of gender politics and gender equality The Oxford Handbook of Philosophy of Social Science

The Arab region continues to be among the most challenging in the world for the progress of women's rights. Equality remains elusive for women and vulnerable groups in the region due to traditional patriarchal cultures, protracted crises, lack of religious freedom, discriminatory legal frameworks, and chronic insecurity. The strongest indicator of peace in any country is in its treatment of women, but the story of women's rights in the region is one of patchy progress and major regress. Today women are experiencing a massive backlash against their rights and fundamental freedoms. And yet there is hope. Feminists, particularly young feminists from the Arab region, fight tirelessly for their rights and are leading movements around the region pushing for change. This book looks at the last 50 years of Arab feminism with a view to understanding what the next 50 years will hold. Built from hundreds of firsthand accounts with women in the region, this book brings together voices across the 22 Arab states to present new pathways to women's rights and gender equality.

APAIS 1991: Australian public affairs information service, Schooling Reform In Hard Times Bob Lingard, John Knight, Paige Porter, 2003-09-02. Based on research carried out under Labour governments throughout the 1990s in Western Australia, the authors consider the social, political, and economic conditions under which policy is formulated, understood, and enacted. They look at how the state structure affects the content and nature of policy statements and provide an outline of the history of policy developments and point to future possibilities and probabilities. Outcomes within funding ceilings, accountability frameworks, and national guidelines are but some of the changes referred to. The emergence of competency-based standards in education and training in schools, workplaces, and the professions is evident throughout Australia at state level, but the concern is whether issues of education should be played out within the state and outside civil society. The authors argue for the mediation in implementation of policy rather than a lambasting of policy formulation and implementation. This text is intended for heads of education departments, PGCE, BEd, MEd students, and researchers interested in education policy and planning. Education policymakers and educational historians.

The Politics of Gender Equality Carol Johnson, 2024-08-22. This open access book provides the first in-depth study of the development of federal gender equality politics and policy in Australia from the 1970s to the present day. Australia has a history of gender equality innovation, including granting women's suffrage long before equivalent countries. From the 1970s on, it became the first country to introduce a women's adviser, femocrats, feminist bureaucrats, and gender-responsive budgeting, but then fell behind, partly due to the influence of Anglosphere neoliberalism. However, the Albanese government has pledged to make Australia a world leader in gender equality again. The book situates Australia in an international context, assessing the useful though sometimes salutary lessons which the Australian experience provides. It engages with key literature, including feminist political theory, discursive framing analysis, gendered public policy analysis, LGBTIQ issues, path dependency, and gender and leadership. It will interest academics, undergraduate and postgraduate researchers, public policy experts, and practitioners, and a broader readership interested in issues of gender equality. The book makes innovative contributions to the study of the politics of gender equality policy, addressing what a gender equality policy agenda could look like if the needs of women in all their intersectional social diversity were the driving force In doing so it addresses a range of issues that are impacting the future of women including an ongoing pandemic technology education and training agendas issues of sovereign capability securitisation climate change and the growth of campaigns that oppose so called gender ideology It explores how current government agendas such as the focus on wellbeing could be made even more gender inclusive Finally the book suggests that Australia as a multicultural but predominantly Western settler colonial society situated in the Asia Pacific has some potentially unique insights to offer in a world facing major geoeconomic and geopolitical change Gender, Nation and Women Politicians in Serbia and Kosovo Gordana

Subotić,2022-03-30 This book examines the ways women politicians in Serbia and Kosovo have imagined constructed and politicised national identity and gender while engaging with politics in the context of the democratisation process The first book to focus on the work of women inside political structures it draws on participant observation and interview material to answer the question of how women in positions of power and influence deal with their national identity and gender in societies deeply divided along ethnic lines Based on close studies of the work of a small number of women from different ethnic backgrounds the author offers comparative analyses of the ways in which women politicians of different ethnicities respond to similar events in their everyday work An original political ethnography that considers engagement of women in formal politics this volume will appeal to scholars across the social sciences with interests in political structures and political participation particularly as these relate to questions of gender nation and ethnicity Education, Globalisation and New
