Abstract

The compulsion to confess

This paper draws on the work of Michel Foucault in order to sketch a preliminary genealogy of the practice of confession in the twentieth century. The essay argues that confession has undergone major transformations, not only from a chiefly religious to a secular practice, but to a form of psychologised self-knowledge productively typical of knowledge itself in post-Kantian modernity. In other words, we argue that confession has become diffused through knowledge practices such that it becomes imperative to confess to a particular style or use of language in the pursuit of such knowledge. The confession of a style in language thus becomes a prerequisite for such knowledge, or the inability to arrive at it. We investigate the phenomenon in the examples of the 'factional' literature of Norman Mailer, and the human science of ethnography.

1. Introduction

In confession the sinner tells what he knows; in analysis the neurotic has to tell more (Freud, 1986:289).

One of the most striking things about the late twentieth century in the West is the fact that despite the existence of a strenuously secular culture, and the ongoing disappearance of formal institutions of confession, the compulsion to confess, even in the most unlikely of contexts, is still unmistakably with us. Confessional discourse continues to thrive and what might appear at first glance to be no more than an arcane or distinctively Christian religious practice has shown itself capable of a surprisingly long and varied life. What is more, far from being seen as conservative, in their contemporary forms confessional practices are most often regarded as progressive and epistemologically radical. In what follows we wish to examine the origins of the contemporary forms of confessional practices and assess their claims to epistemological power.

The Compulsion to Confess Theodor Reik, 1972 The Compulsion to Confess Theodor Reik, 1966 The ^AErotics of Talk Carla Kaplan, 1996-12-12 Is feminism in crisis With many feminists now questioning identification and focusing on differences between women what is the fate of feminist criticism s traditional imperative to rescue women s stories and make their voices heard In this provocative rereading of the classic texts of the feminist literary canon Carla Kaplan takes a hard look at the legacy of feminist criticism and argues that important features of feminism s own canon have been overlooked in the rush to rescue and identify texts African American women s texts she demonstrates often dramatize their distrust of their readers their lack of faith in the cultural conversation through strategies of self silencing and self talk At the same time she argues the homoerotics of women s writing has too often gone unremarked Not only does longing for an ideal listener draw women s texts into a romance with the reader but there is an erotic excess which is part of feminist critical recuperation itself Drawing on a wide range of resources from sociolinguistics and anthropology to literary theory Kaplan s highly readable study proposes a new model for understanding and representing talk She supplies fresh readings of such feminist classics as Jane Eyre The Yellow Wallpaper Incidents in the Life of a Slave Girl Their Eyes Were Watching God and The Color Purple revealing how their erotics of talk works as a rich political allegory and form of social critique

The Art of Confession Christopher Grobe, 2017-11-07 The story of a new style of art and a new way of life in postwar America confessionalism What do midcentury confessional poets have in common with today s reality TV stars They share an inexplicable urge to make their lives an open book and also a sense that this book can never be finished Christopher Grobe argues that in postwar America artists like these forged a new way of being in the world Identity became a kind of work always ongoing never complete to be performed on the public stage The Art of Confession tells the history of this cultural shift and of the movement it created in American art confessionalism Like realism or romanticism confessionalism began in one art form but soon pervaded them all poetry and comedy in the 1950s and 60s performance art in the 70s theater in the 80s television in the 90s and online video and social media in the 2000s Everywhere confessionalism went it stood against autobiography the art of the closed book Instead of just publishing these artists performed with around and against the text of their lives A blend of cultural history literary criticism and performance theory The Art of Confession explores iconic works of art and draws surprising connections among artists who may seem far apart but who were influenced directly by one another Studying extraordinary art alongside ordinary experiences of self betrayal and revelation Christopher Grobe argues that a tradition of confessional performance unites poets with comedians performance artists with social media users reality TV stars with actors and all of them with us There is art this book shows in our most artless acts

Enchantments of the Clinic Carl P. Ellerman, 2010-06-02 Reflecting on his experience in the clinical trenches a pragmatic existential therapist offers a provocative study of power erotic influence and illusion in the clinical relationship Written in a conversational style that makes a challenging subject accessible to specialists in the clinical professions teachers and students of the psychological disciplines and scholars in the humanities and social sciences Enchantments of the Clinic introduces readers to interesting ways in which language ideas and speech as well as illusions of the clinical station enable therapists to cast an unintentional spell that captivates and charms unsuspecting patients Exposing this suggestive underworld of clinical experience where the high stakes game of persuasive dialogical therapy is often won or lost critical attention is focused on the erotization of the clinic the erotization of the clinician and the erotization of clinical confession Using dramatic examples from clinical practice Carl P Ellerman challenges prevailing dogmas of the therapeutic to demonstrate his thesis that enchantments of the clinic facilitate psychological healing if managed well but if mismanaged these volatile erotic enchantments may undermine the struggle against emotional illness in the clinical trenches This ambitious study of the clinical relationship also addresses the disturbing fact that we are dwelling in a postmodern era in which clinical nihilism is flourishing Ellerman conceives the dialogical therapist as a potentially dangerous ethically vulnerable therapeutic artiste whose strategic encounters in the postmodern clinic may be likened to aesthetic experiences in which an education to reality and a love of truth are obsolete or irrelevant notwithstanding a clinical masquerade that reinforces in spellbound patients a blind trust in the phantastic therapist s honesty truthfulness and intellectual integrity Embracing the Socratic mystique Ellerman offers a vigorous philosophic critique of clinical nihilism
