to traditional ancient or prehistoric ball games played in different parts of the world. Codification of the games at English universities during the 19th century. The enormous cultural influence of the British Empire worldwide. These rules of football spread to areas of British influence and directly inspired the development of football in other British colonies. In the 19th century, distinct regional footballs were already developing. Golf football for example, but it incorporated the rules of traditional football games in order to maintain their heritage. In 1888, the Football League was founded in England, becoming the first of many professional football competitions. During the 20th century, various kinds of football grew to become the most popular team sports in the world. Football is the world's most popular game in number of participants and the simplest in terms of rules, and thus the sport can be played almost anywhere from formal football pitches to gymnasium, school playgrounds or beaches. Football governs the Fédération Internationale de Football Association (FIFA). FIFA estimated that at the turn of the 21st century there were approximately 250 million footballers and over 1.3 billion people watched football. In 2010, a combined television audience of more than 26 billion watched the football's premier tournament, the quadrennial men's football World Cup finals.
