Great Britain. National Audit Office, 2008 This National Audit Office report finds that some people approaching the end of their life receive a high quality service but that there is room for improved coordination between health and social care services in planning and delivering end of life care The provision of end of life care is becoming increasingly complex with people living longer and the incidence of frailty and multiple conditions in older people rising Information on peoples wishes is often not captured or shared and a lack of services to support them at home may lead to unplanned and unwanted admissions to hospital In 2006 07 estimated expenditure on specialist palliative care varied considerably between PCTs from 154 to 1 684 per person who died While there are no complete data on the total cost of end of life care NAO estimate the cost of caring for the 27 per cent of people who die from cancer is 1 8 billion in the last year of their life The majority of people approaching the end of their life wish to be cared for outside of hospital so reducing the amount of time they spend there unnecessarily could make resources available to support these people more effectively in their preferred place of care Frontline staff often lack training in delivering basic end of life care Only 29 per cent of doctors and 18 per cent of nurses received pre registration training in end of life care and there is a lack of formal training for staff working in care homes Positive experiences of care were often linked to being treated by staff who understood appreciated and empathised with the end of life situation Handbook of Home Health Care Administration Marilyn D.
