G. Goodman, 2015-04-10 The West no longer regards communism in East Asia as a threat On the contrary because the communist party states of East Asia appear to be undergoing a process of reform directed primarily at economic modernization it is now regarded as a potential market The West s attitude is reinforced by the recognition of East Asia s economic importance more generally a perception which in itself undoubtedly stimulated reform in the region s communist party states The causes extent and consequences of reform in the East Asian communist party states are the concerns of the contributions to this volume first published in 1988 It includes chapters on the reform process in China North Korea Vietnam and Mongolia as well as examinations of the roles played by both China and the Soviet Union in the Asia Pacific region They demonstrate that a belief in a simple single process of economic and political liberalization brought about by the drive for economic modernization the production imperative is a misleading argument Although the production imperative might act as a stimulus to reform it is neither a sufficient nor even a necessary condition In individual countries the communist party s search for legitimacy a change of leadership or the relationship with the USSR have equally been the spur to reform The drive for economic modernization may even be a consequence of the communist party s desire to reform
