

Upper Atmosphere

The Earth's atmosphere has four primary layers: the troposphere, stratosphere, mesosphere, and thermosphere. These layers protect our planet by absorbing harmful radiation.

Absorbing UV in the Mesosphere (SAM)

SAM's burning shield in the Mesosphere (SAM) shields our planet from high-energy solar radiation. These radiation shields are made of ice crystals that form over the summer poles at an altitude of 80 miles and a temperature too cold for water vapor clouds.

Thermosphere

50-575 Miles

In the Thermosphere, molecules of oxygen and nitrogen are ionized by solar radiation. Auroras are visible here. The thermosphere is the layer of the atmosphere that is most affected by solar radiation. It is the only layer of the atmosphere that is not affected by the Earth's magnetic field. The thermosphere is the layer of the atmosphere that is most affected by solar radiation. It is the only layer of the atmosphere that is not affected by the Earth's magnetic field.

Mesosphere

50-60 Miles

During the mesosphere, it is possible to see meteoroids falling from space. In the middle atmosphere and low Earth orbit, there are many small objects. These objects are ionized by solar radiation. The mesosphere is the layer of the atmosphere that is most affected by solar radiation. It is the only layer of the atmosphere that is not affected by the Earth's magnetic field.

Stratosphere

10-50 Miles

The lower layer of the atmosphere is the stratosphere. It is the layer of the atmosphere that is most affected by solar radiation. It is the only layer of the atmosphere that is not affected by the Earth's magnetic field.

Troposphere

0-10 Miles

The troposphere is the layer of the Earth's atmosphere where all weather activity takes place.

Ionosphere

The ionosphere is a layer of plasma formed by the ionization of atoms, oxygen and nitrogen by high-energy solar radiation and cosmic rays. It is the layer of the atmosphere that is most affected by solar radiation. It is the only layer of the atmosphere that is not affected by the Earth's magnetic field.

Balloons, Satellites, and Rockets

SAM's balloons are used to collect in-situ measurements in the atmosphere. However, the mesosphere and thermosphere are too high for balloons to reach, so scientists use instruments on sounding balloons and satellites to gather more detailed measurements of the upper atmosphere.

Communications

A unique property of the ionosphere is that it can reflect short-wave radio waves, enabling communication over great distances by "bouncing" signals off the ionized atmospheric layer. Variability of the ionosphere can interrupt satellite communication, such as errors in GPS signals for commercial air navigation. During solar storms, the layer can even shut down communication between ground stations and satellites.

Northern Lights in the Mesosphere

Evidence of changes in the behavior of northern lights has been observed by the SAM mission. Recent data shows dramatically fewer in size content, leading scientists to speculate about changes in weather conditions and pole-to-pole atmospheric circulation.

SAMNET

The Ballistic Army for Radiation-Induced Reliability Electric Losses (SAMNET) is a balloon-based mission to measure the measurements of SAM's HSP spacecraft. SAMNET seeks to measure the penetration of relativistic electrons from the ionosphere during two multi-balloon campaigns operated in the Southern Hemisphere.
