Routledge Revivals: Development and Social Change in the Pacific Islands (1989) A.D. Couper, 2017-02-17 First published in 1989 The Pacific Islands are amongst the poorest countries of the developing world The special problems of their small size immense distance from major centres and for many very poor agricultural possibilities make development extremely difficult However recent new advances in maritime technology in a wide range of different areas present substantial new opportunities This book surveys the new developments including extended maritime boundaries giant clam farming increased exploitation of ocean minerals and new fisheries techniques and demonstrates the potential for far reaching economic and social development Fisheries Technologies for Developing Countries National Research Council, Policy and Global Affairs, Board on Science and Technology for International Development, 1988-02-01 In developing countries traditional fishermen are important food contributors yet technological information and development assistance to third world nations often focuses on agriculture and industrial fishing without addressing the needs of independent small scale fishermen This book explores technological considerations of small scale primitive fishing technologies and describes innovative relatively inexpensive methods and tools that have already been successfully applied in developing countries It offers practical information about all aspects of small scale fishing including boat design and construction fishing methods and gear artificial reef construction and fish aggregating devices techniques for coastal mariculture and simple methods for processing and preserving fish once they are caught Fisheries Technologies for Developing Countries is illustrated throughout with photographs of the devices and construction methods described in the text The People of the Sea Paul D'Arcy, 2006-01-01 Countering the dominant paradigms of recent Pacific Islands historiography which tend to limit understanding of the sea's importance this volume emphasizes the flux in the maritime environment and how it instilled an expectation and openness toward outside influences and the rapidity with which cultural change could occur in relations between various Islander groups Students and scholars of Pacific history and environmental and cultural studies will welcome this re evaluation of the sea's influence in Oceanic history BOOK JACKET New Books National Defense University. Indo-Pacific Region Subhasish Sarangi, 2019-09-02 The Indo Pacific has emerged as a strategic pivot in the evolving balance of power. The region encompasses about 60 per cent of the world population, three of the ten largest economies, five of the ten most populated countries, and three of the ten largest countries. It is home to an enormously populous and diverse mix of ethnicities, cultures, political systems, religions, and economic models. Global trade and energy linkages bind the oceans such that events across the region are strongly interrelated and mutually dependent. Considering the importance of this region, the United Service Institution of India (USI) organised a seminar on 01-02 November 2018 at New Delhi on the theme of Evolving Geopolitics of the Indo Pacific Region: Challenges and Prospects. The seminar brought together varying perspectives on the challenges and prospects in the security and economic domain in the region and the framework for architectures for collective security and economic integration. The seminar was organised into three separate sessions. The first session covered security challenges and prospects in the Indo Pacific Region. The second session was devoted to economic challenges and prospects in the Indo Pacific Region, and the third session to discussions on frameworks for cooperation. The proceedings were rounded off with a panel discussion on the furtherance of security and economic cooperation in the Indo Pacific Region. This book is based on the papers presented by various speakers during the seminar. Encyclopedia of Ocean Law and Policy in Asia-Pacific Seokwoo Lee, 2022-11-21 This timely encyclopedia addresses the underrepresented scholarly state practice of the Asia Pacific region in negotiating and implementing the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS), a continuing cornerstone of focus for regional and non-regional states alike. Further highlights for each represented state include ocean treaty accessions, domestic implementation, maritime zones, maritime disputes, exploring and exploiting living and non-living resources, marine environment protection, marine scientific research, dispute settlement, and contributions to the development of the law of the sea. The law of the sea is brought to life in the domestic laws, policies, and institutions of states discussed. Rule of law in the governance of new frontiers of the marine environment Yen-Chiang Chang, Kum Fai Yuen, David Ong, Shih-Ming Kao, 2023-10-06 Human Capital Formation and Economic Growth in Asia and the Pacific Wendy Dobson, 2013-07-18 The entire planet looks to Asian and other emerging markets to sustain growth momentum as traditional markets in the USA and Europe struggle with the slow and arduous processes of deleveraging after the global financial crisis. At the same time, there is growing recognition in Asia that the sources of growth must shift to sustain their own growth momentum in the years ahead. Heavy reliance on the region's high savings rates and plentiful supplies of low-cost labour will have to shift towards increasing the human capital embodied in more educated and skilled labour forces capable of contributing to productivity growth and innovation as future drivers of growth. Human Capital Formation and Economic Growth in Asia and the Pacific focuses on why and how countries are making this shift. The demographic transition is shown to be a significant factor as ageing populations in Japan, South Korea, and China manage declining growth in the labour force by stepping up investments in education and by changing policies and institutions.

Lessons to be learned from these experiences by more youthful populations in Southeast Asia are explored. In addition, attention is paid to the consequences of cross border differentials in technical knowledge and the quantity and quality of human capital. Several implications for public policy and for international cooperation on human capital issues in the Asian region are identified. The chapters in this volume are edited versions of papers presented at the 35th Pacific Trade and Development conference held in Vancouver, Canada, in June 2012. The conference goal was to better understand how governments and business in Asia and the Pacific can apply the key insight that one of the reasons economies grow is because of human capital formation: the quality and diversity of the labour force are augmented, not just because the labour force grows in size. Students of Asia's growth prospects will find several aspects of this volume of particular value. It includes chapters on the big picture, conceptual and measurement issues, on country experiences in meeting the imperatives of the demographic transition and investing in education and skills training, and on country experiences with attracting foreign knowledge and the supply and recruitment of skills across borders in Asia and the Pacific. Policymakers will also find useful the discussions of policy implications and the menu of issues requiring intergovernmental cooperation within the Asian region.

Regional Institutions, Geopolitics and Economics in the Asia-Pacific Steven B. Rothman, Utpal Vyas, Yoichiro Sato, 2017-04-21. This volume discusses the relationship between economics, geopolitics, and regional institutional growth and development in the Asia Pacific region. How do states re-define their relationships amid the current global power transition? How do rival actors influence the rules and formation of new institutions for their own benefit? What role will institutions take as independent actors in influencing and constraining the behavior of states? Institutional development in Asia is characterized by idiosyncratic and diverse motivations, both material and non-material, a variety of policy strategies, strategic and norm-based, and the looming question of China's future depth of involvement as its economic position becomes more stable and its confidence in foreign affairs grows. The book reflects the broadening definition of Asia by examining multiple perspectives, including Japan, China, South Korea, the United States, Australia, India, Russia, and Taiwan. In addition to state actors, the contributors address several important regional institutions in development, such as the ASEAN 3+6 and the East Asian Summit, the Asian Infrastructure Investment Bank (AIIB), the Asian Development Bank (ADB), existing security alliances, and other bilateral institutions. Ultimately, this volume describes the unique, slow and diverse growth of a multitude of regional institutions, the complexities of generating cooperation, membership concerns, and competition between states and with existing institutions in the context of China's increasing confidence and strength. This book will be of much interest to students of Asian politics, regional security, international organizations, and foreign policy.
