Seminar paper from the year 2006 in the subject Business economics Supply Production Logistics grade 1.0 European Business School International University Schlo Reichartshausen Oestrich Winkel SMI Supply Management Institute course Seminararbeit Logistics and Business Engineering language English abstract In the light of the ongoing globalization and evolution of today's business world logistics has gained significant visibility and is regarded as a critical link to improved corporate performance. The value of the global logistics market accounted for 591.1 billion in 2005 and is expected to further grow by 22.1% until 2010. Apart from a constant pressure to reduce costs and improve efficiency, logistics increasingly serves as a differentiating feature for products and an important lever for improving customer satisfaction. Coordination with other departments also plays a crucial role. The increasing complexity and dynamics of the business world did not leave logistics unaffected. Since the end of the Cold War, the Department of Defense has dramatically reduced its fighting forces and logistics infrastructure. The

Department estimates it is spending about 59 billion a year on logistics support 1 programs to operate and sustain weapon systems 2 but it reports that significant reductions can be achieved by adopting a variety of different logistics support practices We reported in January 2001 that serious weaknesses persist throughout the Department s logistics activities and that it is unclear to what extent ongoing reengineering management improvement initiatives will overcome them 3 The Department has taken a number of significant steps in recent years directed at improving its outdated and inefficient logistics processes Specifically the Office of the Secretary of Defense and each of the military services and appropriate Defense commands have established a number of significant logistics reengineering efforts In addition the Office of the Secretary of Defense developed the Fiscal Year 2000 Logistics Strategic Plan in August 1999 which outlines six overall objectives a basic
