This essay collection comes from an economist and so is not, strictly speaking, a philosophy book. But the author is an outstanding economist, and Strategies of Commitment is a very philosophical book. All pieces in it are remarkably lucid and truly engaging; each contains an original idea, and some read as series of insights; many offer examples of the kind that works effectively in a variety of settings – a conference talk, a journal article, a university class or even at the dinner table. Topics covered include old as well as relatively recent interests of the author: commitment as it figures in the contexts of threats, promises, bargaining and self-command, the dynamics of social segregation, arms control and climate change. The book will be of interest to philosophers of economics, rational choice theory, game theory, ethics, political theory and environmental philosophy.

The other chain of associations begins with Hobbes’s idea that commitments should be made and kept for self-interested reasons. Keeping a commitment is in one’s own interest, on Hobbes’s reckoning, just in case a strong

Drawing on cases including the U S withdrawal from Vietnam and Washington's pivot to Asia amid China's growing regional role it constructs an original balance of commitment model to explain continuity and change in U S Southeast Asia policy. Balance of commitment goes beyond balance of power approaches to explain how translating Southeast Asia's importance in U S thinking into actual commitments has proven challenging for policymakers as it requires simultaneously calibrating adjustments to power shifts threat perceptions and resource extraction. The book applies the balance of commitment approach to several practical case studies based on hundreds of conversations with policymakers and experts in the United States and Southeast Asia personal experiences across nearly two decades and primary and secondary source material across a half century. The findings suggest that the challenges of U S commitment to the region are rooted not simply in differences between administrations or divergences in outlook between Washington and regional capitals but tough balancing acts for U S policymakers in domestic politics and wider foreign policy. As such shaping U S strategy in Southeast Asia and calibrating and sustaining commitment requires not just appreciating Southeast Asia's significance but committing to the region in ways that manage structural aspects of U S thinking capabilities and resourcing.
