Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book without typos from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1922 edition. Excerpt CHAPTER FOURTEEN INTO THE JUNGLE WITH MISSIONARIES THE more one wanders in the tropics the stronger grows the call of the wanderlust. After I had been in the Embassy in Lima for two months it called me. Griffis of The Leader was its mouthpiece. He came to me with the announcement that two of the high officials of a Protestant Missionary society were organizing an expedition to cross overland through the little traveled Amazonian jungles to Brazil. A Peruvian cabinet minister of his acquaintance had offered to send them through the wilderness with the fortnightly mail train which carried letters to Iquitos and had invited Griffis to send me along at the government's expense to write up the expedition for The Leader. Several months earlier on my trip to the Chanchamayo I had seen the beginning of the Pichis Trail by which the party planned to travel a tiny footpath that wound eastward through an otherwise unbroken jungle and to an adventureseeker it had looked inviting. So I resigned my position as attaché. The Tropical Tramps in Lima were loud in their disapproval. Well said Mulvaney I never thought you'd sink so low as to run around with missionaries. Only Red Patterson defended me. Shut up I he told the other habitués of Morris Bar. E's a fine little Christian gentleman. If it wasn't for me own business interests me alligator farm in Venezuela or me silver mines in Chile and me detective work in the Peruvian Secret Service I'd go along meself an preach the gospel to the cannibals. It was with both reluctance and relief that I left the tramp fraternity. They were roughnecks most of them they didn't care a hang whether they ever amounted to anything in life so long as they found adventure and enjoyment their.

Adventures of a Tropical Tramp Harry La Tourette Foster, 2019-11-22 The Adventures of a Tropical Tramp first published in 1922 is the first of several travel narratives by Harry La Tourette Foster. 1894-1932 a World War One veteran who seized by wanderlust would spend much of his adult life traveling and working first in South America the subject of this book and later in Asia the South Pacific and the Caribbean. While in South America Foster recounts his experiences as a miner reporter war correspondent diplomatic attaché guide companion and piano player ending with an extended voyage down the Amazon and its tributaries. His writing vividly and often humorously portrays the people he met the local culture and his desire for new adventures. Included are 4 pages of photographs.

The Adventures of a Tropical Tramp Harry La Tourette Foster, 2023-07-18 This memoir follows the journey of a young man who leaves behind a life of privilege in search of adventure in the tropics. From working on a plantation to exploring remote jungles Foster's exploits are thrilling and offer a unique perspective on life in the early 20th century.
