Voices in the Kitchen Meredith E. Abarca, 2006 Literally chilaquiles are a breakfast I grew up eating fried corn tortillas with tomato chile sauce Symbolically they are the culinary metaphor for how working class women speak with the seasoning of their food from the Introduction Through the ages and across cultures women have carved out a domain in which their cooking allowed them to express themselves strengthen family relationships and create a world of shared meanings with other women In Voices in the Kitchen Meredith E Abarca features the voices of her mother and several other family members and friends seated at their kitchen tables to share the grassroots world view of these working class Mexican and Mexican American women In the kitchen Abarca demonstrates women assert their own saz n seasoning not only in their cooking but also in their lives Through a series of oral histories or charlas culinarias culinary chats the women interviewed address issues of space sensual knowledge artistic and narrative expression and cultural and social change From her mother s breakfast chilaquiles to the most elaborate traditional dinner these women share their lives as they share their savory symbolic and theoretical meanings of food The charlas culinarias represent spoken personal narratives testimonial autobiography and a form of culinary memoir one created by the cooks as writers who speak from their kitchen space Abarca then looks at writers as cooks to add an additional dimension to the understanding of women s power to define themselves Voices in the Kitchen joins the extensive culinary research of the last decade in exploring the importance of the knowledge found in the practical concrete and temporal aspects of the ordinary practice of everyday cooking Shared Knowledge, Shared Power Veysel Apaydin, 2017-11-20 This volume brings together the experiences and research of heritage practitioners archaeologists and educators to explore new and unique approaches to heritage studies The last several decades have witnessed a rapid increase in the field of cultural heritage studies worldwide This increase in the number of studies and in interest by the public as well as academics has effected substantial change in the understanding of heritage and approaches to heritage studies This change has also impacted the perception of communities how to study and protect the physical residues of heritage and how to share the knowledge of heritage It has brought the issue of who has knowledge and how the value of heritage can be shared more effectively with communities who then ascribe meaning and value to heritage materials Heritage studies until a few decades ago exclusively studied the material culture of the past as part of elitist approaches that completely neglected communities rights to knowledge of their own heritage Additionally heritage practitioners and archaeologists neither shared this knowledge nor engaged with communities about their heritage Communities were also mostly deprived from contributing to heritage and archaeological studies This kind of top down approach was quite common in many parts of the world But recent studies and research in the field have shown the importance of including the public in projects and that sharing the knowledge produced through heritage studies and archaeological works is significant for the protection and preservation of heritage materials it has finally been understood that excluding the public from heritage is not ethical This publication presents a wide array of case studies with different approaches and methods from many parts of the world to answer these questions

Writing in the Kitchen David A. Davis, Tara Powell, 2014-08-04 Scarlett O Hara munched on a radish and vowed never to go hungry again Vardaman Bundren ate bananas in Faulkner s Jefferson and the Invisible Man dined on a sweet potato in Harlem Although food and stories may be two of the most prominent cultural products associated with the South the connections between them have not been thoroughly explored until now Southern food has become the subject of increasingly self conscious intellectual consideration The Southern Foodways Alliance the Southern Food and Beverage Museum food themed issues of Oxford American and Southern Cultures and a spate of new scholarly and popular books demonstrate this interest Writing in the Kitchen explores the relationship between food and literature and makes a major contribution to the study of both southern literature and of southern foodways and culture more widely This collection examines food writing in a range of literary expressions including cookbooks agricultural journals novels stories and poems Contributors interpret how authors use food to explore the changing South considering the ways race ethnicity class gender and region affect how and what people eat They describe foods from specific southern places such as New Orleans and Appalachia engage both the historical and contemporary South and study the food traditions of ethnicities as they manifest through the written word

The Acrobatic Muse Richard Kendall Munkittrick, 1897

Outsiders Or Equals? Tanya Fitzgerald, 2009 Shortlisted for the Anne Bloomfield Prize 2010 Across the ninety years of its history the University of New Zealand 1871 1961 appointed four women professors to the academic staff From the outset while the woman professor was an insider to the Academy based on her qualifications and professional credentials on the basis of her gender she was a relative outsider to this deeply patriarchal institution Accordingly academic women and in particular this first generation of women professors were officially invisible both to their male colleagues and to the institution This is not to suggest that the presence of a woman professor was unproblematic or that she sat easily on the margins of men s scholarly worlds This book traces the personal and professional histories of each woman professor and examines their contribution to the expansion of higher education for women On the basis of extensive archival research in New Zealand England and the United States the author uses Bourdieu s notions of habitus field and capital to analyse this intellectual community of women and the professionalisation of academic work The book rehabilitates the woman professor from the margins of historical scholarship and offers an insight into a forgotten aspect of the history of women s higher education the history of women and the professoriate

Colyar,2005-01-01 Analyzes and defines the parameters of effective college outreach programs The Racial Crisis in American Higher Education William A. Smith,Philip G. Altbach,Kofi Lomotey,2012-02-01 Why is it that as we enter the twenty first century the nation s predominantly white colleges and universities continue to be settings where people of color feel unwelcome and marginalized The contributors to this volume dissect a variety of structural and attitudinal factors that are prevalent in the higher education community organizational constructs and value orientations which seem to hark more to the past than to the future They comment on the political social and economic factors that have shaped academic culture and buttressed its quietly efficient maintenance of racially discriminatory practices The American system of higher education is often regarded as the best in the world Smith Altbach and Lomotey have edited a volume that implicitly asks how much better still it could be if it embraced people of color and provided them with a supportive and nurturing environment one which encouraged them to reach their fullest creative and intellectual potential Indeed this will probably be the most significant challenge that the academy faces in the twenty first century William B Harvey Vice President and Director Office of Minorities in Higher Education American Council on Education Washington D C Remaking Home Economics Sharon Y. Science, Technologies and Material Culture in the History of Education

Heather Ellis, 2020-05-18 Developed out of a 2015 conference of the History of Education Society UK this book explores the interconnections between the histories of science technologies and material culture and the history of education The contributions express a shared concern over the extent to which the history of science and technology and the history of education are too frequently written about separately from each other despite being intimately connected This state of affairs they suggest is linked to broader divisions in the history of knowledge which has for many years been carved up into sections reflective of the academic subject divisions that structure modern universities and higher education in the West Most noticeably this has occurred with the history of science but more recently the history of humanities has been divided as well The contributions to this volume demonstrate the diversity and originality of research currently being conducted into the connections between the history of science and the history of education The importance of objects in teaching and their value as pedagogical tools emerges as a particularly significant area of research located at the intersection between the two fields of enquiry Indeed it is the materiality of education a focus on the use of objects pedagogical practices and particular spaces which seems to offer some of the most promising avenues for exploring further the relationship between the histories of science and education This book was originally published as a special issue of the History of Education
