

Evidence-Based Strategies for Working with Offenders

Over the last 20 years, a critical mass of social science evidence has accumulated challenging what had previously been the prevailing notion that “nothing works” in the rehabilitation of offenders. Findings from academic and program evaluation literatures in the fields of psychology, criminal justice, sociology, and public policy suggest that evidence-based interventions, which effectively combine the core principles of rehabilitation (risk-need-responsivity), deterrence, procedural justice, and collaboration, can significantly reduce recidivism. Additionally, emerging treatments for previously undertreated and underpublicized criminogenic needs (i.e., cognitive-behavioral therapy for criminal thinking) are proving feasible and effective with offender populations in the United States and abroad.

This fact sheet seeks to distill a growing body of research about evidence-based strategies in five areas for reducing recidivism among criminal offenders: (1) assessment, (2) treatment, (3) deterrence, (4) procedural justice, and (5) collaboration.

1. ASSESSMENT

USE VALIDATED SCREENING AND ASSESSMENT TOOLS TO DETERMINE OFFENDER RISKS AND NEEDS.

Offenders vary widely both in the future risk they pose to public safety and in their specific treatment needs. Evidence-based screening and assessment protocols can help criminal justice officials match each offender to an intervention of appropriate type and intensity. Screening refers to the use of one or more brief tools to identify possible risk and needs early in the justice system process, such as at the booking or initial arraignment stage. Screening tools indicate the need for further assessment and typically do not exceed 10 or 15 minutes. Assessment refers to a longer evaluation process that should occur before an offender is matched to a particular treatment type. Both screening and assessment tools should be validated and should focus on major “criminogenic” risk and need factors, or those factors that research has demonstrated to be statistically correlated with recidivism (see below).
