Dot and the Kangaroo(annotated) Ethel C Pedley,2020-02-26 Little Dot had lost her way in the bush She knew it and was very frightened She was too frightened in fact to cry but stood in the middle of a little dry bare space looking around her at the scraggy growths of prickly shrubs that had torn her little dress to rags scratched her bare legs and feet till they bled and pricked her hands and arms as she had pushed madly through the bushes for hours seeking her home Sometimes she looked up to the sky But little of it could be seen because of the great tall trees that seemed to her to be trying to reach heaven with their far off crooked branches She could see little patches of blue sky between the tangled tufts of her way in the and was very drooping leaves and as the dazzling sunlight had faded she began to think it was getting late and that very soon it would be night Australian Children's Books, 1980-2000 Marcie Muir,Kerry White,2004 All Australian children's books published from 1989 to 2000 are listed in this essential reference for those who appreciate the richness of Australian writing for children Following the same format as volumes 1 and 2 in this series chronicling books published as early as 1774 entries include publishing details the number of illustrations and the awards received for each book This third volume follows the continuing careers of authors such as Mem Fox Bob Graham Robin Klein and Paul Jennings and traces changes in the popularity of Australian themes and settings to identify publishing trends Varied cultural aspects of modern day life are shown from globalization commercialism and the rise of the middle class in Asia to desktop publishing outcome based school curricula and the modern obsession with celebrities all of which are reflected in the type and quantity of books produced by Australian writers and publishers The wealth of included material will extend researchers understanding of the range of Australian children s books
