The human body is made up of many different parts. Each part has a specific function. The brain is the control center of the body. It sends signals to the muscles and organs to tell them what to do.

The heart is a muscle that pumps blood around the body. It has four chambers: two on the left and two on the right. Blood flows from the right side to the left side and then out to the rest of the body.

The lungs are two organs in the chest that take in oxygen from the air and give it to the blood. They are connected to the trachea, which is the windpipe. The trachea leads down to the bronchi, which branch out into the lungs.

The stomach is a large organ in the upper part of the body. It is responsible for digesting food. Food enters the stomach through the mouth and is broken down into smaller pieces. The stomach then sends the food to the small intestine.
