By far, the most satisfying experiences I have had included the transformation of dreams into reality. Whether it was obtaining a college degree, improving our instructional unit in social studies, or committing to a life-long relationship, everything worthwhile started with an image of some desired future. Of course there are plenty of surprises and serendipitous events along the way, but knowing and choosing to take advantage of some, and not others, is often guided by at least a fuzzy view of the future state.

In my work with Creative Problem Solving (CPS) since 1970, I have had a few peak experiences which had helped me understand and appreciate the power of CPS. One development stimulated the first writing of this paper a while ago. It was the application and integration of the current approach to CPS by Ken McCluskey and colleagues within the area of reclaiming talent with at-risk youth. I was particularly gratified that it was the current approach to CPS that was being used to engage those of talent and high ability to learn and use their hidden creative strengths, particularly those who could not reach their dreams within the current system of education.

The descriptions and graphic depictions of CPS have changed frequently over the past sixty years. During that time much research and application have
