Recommended Strategies of Teaching Reading Skills to Down Syndrome Children in Kindergarten Through Third Grade Ann L. Ostern, 1996

Reading and Writing Development for Children with Down Syndrome (11-16 Years) Gillian Bird, Sue Buckley, Down Syndrome Educational Trust, 2002 Reading skills are often a strength for teenagers with Down syndrome. Teenagers can often read at a higher level than would be predicted from their general cognitive and language abilities. Those who have not achieved reading success in their primary years may make significant progress during their teenage years. Reading and writing skills are important for everyday life and for access to the world of literature. They are also powerful tools for developing the speech and language of teenagers with Down syndrome and for mediating their cognitive development. Reading and writing can support communication, enable teenagers to achieve greater independence and enrich education and academic attainments across the curriculum. This module explains how language and literacy teaching can work together to promote the development of teenagers with Down syndrome. Guidance on teaching methods, expectations and examples of teenagers' work combine to show teachers and parents how to include teenagers in literacy learning programmes with an understanding of particular issues related to speech, language and memory development. This module should be read in conjunction with Reading and Writing Development for Children with Down Syndrome (0-5 Years). An overview DSii 07 01 as the overview provides important background information on how individuals learn to read, the adaptations that will help pupils with Down syndrome and the benefits of being involved in reading instruction.

Children with Down's Syndrome Stephanie Lorenz, 2012-10-12 This practical handbook offers advice on strategies for meeting the special educational needs of children with Down's syndrome in mainstream schools. The aim is to increase the confidence of support assistants, teachers, SENCOs and senior managers in both primary and secondary schools in providing a quality education for these pupils while using scarce resources to best effect. The author offers an introduction to the particular characteristics of children with Down's syndrome and their impact on learning and behaviour. She considers the benefits of inclusive education and the most effective ways in which the National Curriculum can be made accessible. She also examines working with the whole school, parents and outside agencies as well as providing practical resources such as photocopiable proformas and checklists, materials for INSET in schools and support services and a list of reading materials.
