studies to help the reader make practical sense of theoretical ideas and develop a critical and reflective attitude. Hard and pressing questions are asked so that beliefs, ideas, views and assumptions about notions of the child and childhood are constantly critiqued and reframed for the post modern world. The first part of the book explores the early years power and politics by looking at child rights, the politics of play, families and working with parents and carers. The second part explores facts and fantasies about childhood experiences such as anti discriminatory practice, the law, child protection and health issues. The final section encourages the reader to explore what childhood means from historical, ideological and cultural perspectives and looks at how popular assumptions arise. This is a key critical text for early childhood students, academics and researchers as well as practitioners who want to develop their reflective practice.

Teaching Across the Early Years 3-7 Hilary Cooper, Chris Sixsmith, 2004-11-23. This practical and accessible book explores ways of developing continuity and coherence in children's learning from three to seven years old. It is based around three case studies in which tutors on Initial Teacher Training courses worked with early years practitioners in three different pre school settings, each linked to a primary school. The book describes how they successfully managed to plan and teach integrated themes across the age range in the context of the requirements of the Foundation Stage and the National Curriculum. Each case study has a different focus: science, design and technology, the arts, including an ICT strand, the humanities, including a physical education strand. English and mathematics dimensions run through each theme. The book is alive with discussion of children's art, language, drama and music, captured as field notes, writing, drawing and as video tape. Each chapter concludes with suggestions of ways in which readers can develop the ideas in their own contexts.
