is taking place in New Testament studies Throughout the twentieth century New Testament scholarship primarily worked under the assumption that only two languages Aramaic and Greek were in common use in the land of Israel in the first century The current contributors investigate various areas where increasing linguistic data and changing perspectives have moved Hebrew out of a restricted marginal status within first century language use and the impact on New Testament studies Five articles relate to the general sociolinguistic situation in the land of Israel during the first century while three articles present literary studies that interact with the language background The final three contributions demonstrate the impact this new understanding has on the reading of Gospel texts     University of California Union Catalog of Monographs
