bedrock rivers in diverse environments Landscapes and Landforms of the Central Sahara Jasper Knight, Stefania Merlo, Andrea Zerboni, 2024-01-02 This book describes the Central Sahara region bringing together an unprecedented combination of diverse and often historic research published in different languages in order to describe its varied landscapes and landforms The Central Sahara region consists of Libya Algeria Mali Niger and Chad countries that share similar landscape histories and common landscape traits including massifs sand seas paleowater features and large depressions Furthermore human settlement of this region goes hand in hand with climate and environmental changes and landscape evolution during the Holocene and earlier hence Central Saharan landscapes and landforms provide valuable insights into landscape human relationships over long timescales The book offers a comprehensive yet accessible reference source drawing on both past and present interdisciplinary research and gathering the insights of authors from many different countries to explore a region that has largely been overlooked in available literature California Geology, 1974

Garner, 1974 The Quarterly Journal of the Geological, Mining, and Metallurgical Society of India Geological, Mining, and Metallurgical Society of India, 1974 Pacific Island Landscapes Patrick D. Nunn, 1998 Pacific island landscapes explores the origin and physical history of one of the least known regions of the Earth's surface the Pacific Islands Never before has such a systematic account of the island groups been compiled In this volume Patrick Nunn outlines how each of the main island groups originated then gives detailed accounts much from his own research of islands in Fiji Samoa and Tonga A final substantive chapter treats the interaction of early human settlers of Pacific Islands and their environments Back cover Geopub Review of Geographical Literature, 1974 Geography, 1982 Includes section Reviews and other bibliographical material Humid Landforms Ian Douglas, 1977 Landforms created by running water dominate the land surface of earth However although the role of water is seen everywhere it is seen at its best in those regions where the climates are wet enough to support a forest vegetation with a continuous canopy The seasonal fluctuations in the character of precipitation with snow in winter and rain in summer which characterize cool temperate forest climates and the legacies of recent past cold periods in high latitudes means that the landforms of the humid tropics should be regarded as the normal or type features due to erosion by running water This discussion of humid landforms together with J A Mabbutt's volume Desert Landforms completes a series of seven volumes on systematic geomorphology It attempts to break with traditional approaches and to discuss humid landforms from the standpoint of the humid tropics In addition it seeks to demonstrate that the processes creating and destroying landforms are also those that regulate biotic activity at the earth's surface The approach followed in this book is to describe the processes affecting the evolution of landforms in terms of the circulations of energy water and materials before introducing the complication of legacies of different ages from the past Theories of landform evolution are briefly reviewed in the final chapter
