Keith Harvey, 2014-07-16 How was American gay liberation received in France between the events of Stonewall and the AIDS crisis What part did translations of American gay fiction play in this reception How might the various intercultural movements that characterize the French response to American gay be conceptualized as translational Intercultural Movements attempts to answer these questions by situating detailed analyses of key textual and paratextual dimensions of selected translations within an understanding of the French fascination in the 1970s with the model of gay emancipation in the United States Through an examination of the translations of Andrew Holleran's Dancer from the Dance John Rechy's Rushes and Larry Kramer's Faggots the book explores the dynamic of attraction assimilation transformation and rejection that characterizes French attitudes at the time In particular representations of the figure of the queen of the effeminate homosexual are identified as particularly sensitive textual zones for understanding French views on homosexual emancipation in the light of American developments Key figures involved in these debates include translators academics and activists such as Alain Emanuel Dreuilhe Michel Foucault Guy Hocquenghem Brice Matthieussent Philippe Mikriammos and Georges Michel Sarotte many of whom lived out the translational pressures of the time through various types of physical as well as textual displacement into the foreign space More broadly the book envisages using translation and translatedness as the paradigm case for all sorts of intercultural traffic while also intimating the possibility of an intercultural studies predicated upon a vision of cultural spaces as necessarily traversed and constituted by mis recognitions of cultural others

Travel Narratives in Translation, 1750-1830 Alison Martin, Susan Pickford, 2013-05-07 This book examines how non fictional travel accounts were rewritten reshaped and reoriented in translation between 1750 and 1850 a period that saw a sudden surge in the genre s popularity It explores how these translations played a vital role in the transmission and circulation of knowledge about foreign peoples lands and customs in the Enlightenment and Romantic periods The collection makes an important contribution to travel writing studies by looking beyond metaphors of mobility and cultural transfer to focus specifically on what happens to travelogues in translation Chapters range from discussing essential differences between the original and translated text to relations between authors and translators from intra European narratives of Grand Tour travel to scientific voyages round the world and from established male travellers and translators to their historically less visible female counterparts Drawing on European travel writing in English French German Spanish and Portuguese the book charts how travelogues were selected for translation how they were reworked to acquire new aesthetic political or gendered identities and how they sometimes acquired a radically different character and content to meet the needs and expectations of an emergent international readership The contributors address aesthetic political and gendered aspects of travel writing in translation drawing productively on other disciplines and research areas that encompass aesthetics the history of science literary geography and the history of the book

Towards New Ways of Terminology Description Rita Temmerman, 2000-06-15 Based on an empirical study of categorisation and lexicalisation processes in a corpus of scientific publications on the life sciences Rita Temmerman questions the validity of traditional terminology theory Her findings are that the traditional approach impedes a pragmatic and realistic description of a large number of categories and terms Inspired by the cognitive sciences she develops an alternative The main principles of this new theory imply a combined semasiological and onomasiological perspective only few categories can be clearly delineated form and content of definitions vary according to category types and user s requirements synonymy and polysemy are functional in special language and a diachronic approach is unavoidable This last principle implies the varying importance of historical information in definitions the non arbitrariness of lexicalisation and the importance of cognitive models In a last chapter the author shows how the methods and principles of the alternative approach are applicable in terminography and how this is going to have an impact on software for terminological database construction This book will be valuable for specialists in terminology theory practising terminographers and for anybody interested in special language cognitive models and prototype theory

How Does it Feel? Charlotte Bosseaux, 2007 Narratology is concerned with the study of narratives but surprisingly it does not usually distinguish between original and translated texts This lack of distinction is regrettable In recent years the visibility of translations and translators has become a widely discussed topic in Translation Studies yet the issue of translating a novel's point of view has remained relatively unexplored It seems crucial to ask how far a translator's choices affect the novel's point of view and whether characters or narrators come across similarly in originals and translations This book addresses exactly these questions It proposes a method by which it becomes possible to investigate how the point of view of a work of fiction is created in an original and adapted in translation It shows that there are potential problems involved in the translation of linguistic features that constitute point of view and that this has an impact on the way works are translated

Computers in Translation John Newton, 2002-09-11 Researchers have been attempting to develop systems that would emulate the human translation process for some forty years What is it about human language that makes this such a daunting challenge While other software packages have achieved rapid and lasting success machine translation has failed to penetrate the worldwide market to any appreciable extent Does this merely reflect a reluctance to adopt it or does it signal a more fundamental and intractable problem Computers in Translation is a comprehensive guide to the practical issues surrounding machine translation and computer based translation tools Translators system designers system operators and researchers present the facts about machine translation its history its successes its limitations and its potential Three chapters deal with actual machine translation applications discussing installations including the METEO system used in Canada to translate weather forecasts and weather reports and the system used in the Foreign Technology Division of the US Air Force
