Science Services Division,1965 Charcoal, Food, and Water Production in the Tropics: Applying Nexus Thinking to Improve Research and Policy Approaches in Complex Landscapes Tuyeni Heita Mwampamba,Adrian Ghilardi,Rob Bailis,2020-02-04 Editorial Tuyeni H Mwampamba Rob Bailis Adrian Ghilardi Urbanization food and water consumption trends in many tropical countries show that demand for charcoal as a source of cooking energy meat grain and water will rise to proportions that surpass the ability of existing ecosystems to supply these services simultaneously and at desired qualities Consequently drastic changes to policy and practice are needed to improve ecosystem potential and or alter demand trends Traditional charcoal production in sub Saharan Africa South East Asia and Latin America often competes or co exists with livestock keeping and agriculture and has a tendency to occur in water limited woodlands The co occurrence of charcoal and food production results in complex landscapes characterized by strong interactions between subsystems managed by multiple sets of actors with potentially competing objectives These social ecological systems provide goods and services that are essential to millions of people throughout the global south Nevertheless there have been very few detailed studies of such systems particularly on the individual and combined effects of charcoal crop and livestock production on the hydrological system that maintains them and vice versa As a result these multi use landscapes are typically managed by short sighted highly generalized mono sectorial policies that ignore important tradeoffs and undercapitalize on synergies A system level approach could provide important insights that improve and expand current understanding of this energy food water nexus Tackling urgent and complex problems composed of multiple and interrelated factors lies at the heart of nexus thinking an approach that examines the inter relatedness and interdependencies of environmental resources and their transitions and fluxes across spatial scales and between compartments UNU FLORES 2015 and relies on interdisciplinary research and multi sector policy teams It has attracted significant interest from international organizations the private sector and governments as a way to develop integrated equitable solutions that involve inputs from multiple stakeholders However this approach is notably absent in the research arena Identifying appropriate interventions for achieving sustainable charcoal and food production and maintaining the underlying hydrological system on which they depend requires that the systems are considered simultaneously and that their biophysical social and political inter relations are well understood Taking charcoal as the nexus entry point this Research Topic aims to generate new understanding of charcoal production systems by incorporating agriculture and hydrology into the matrix We were interested in empirical articles reviews meta analytical articles and perspective papers that address at least two of the three nexus components and which offer provocative and insightful perspectives into the nexus as a whole We hope that this Research Topic will 1 facilitate identification of research gaps policy opportunities and priorities for the nexus 2 kick start the development of a community of researchers and practitioners working on the nexus and 3 permit the development of a research agenda that explores the nexus globally across multiple study sites

The FAUNA and FLORA ENDEMIC of MADAGASCAR Volume 2 Tongazara Flavien Bruno Rasolonjatovo, 2019-07-31 The fossa closely resembles a small cougar His body is thin and his limbs are muscular As for its tail it is if the rest of the body The head and torso have a total length of between 70 and 80 cm while the tail alone measures 65 to 70 cm Its head reminiscent of that of the mongoose is extended by a wide and short muzzle This head is flanked by rounded ears and brown eyes Males are usually larger than females These have a weight between 6 and 8 kg while females have a weight generally between 5 and 6 kg The fossas which colonize the East and the North of Madagascar are smaller than those that swarm in the west and the south Individuals weighing 20 kg have already been recorded in some countries The fossa has a fine sense of smell good vision and exceptional hearing This animal is rather robust and it is rare that the fossa raised in captivity develop pathologies The fur of the males is identical to that of the females It is red brown on the back and ochre yellow on the belly From its scientific name Catharanthus roseus Madagascar periwinkle is a herbaceous plant of the family Apocynaceae Useful in the manufacture of pharmaceutical remedies this beautiful plant specimen endemic to the Big Island has been successfully introduced in many tropical regions But it is annual in temperate zones Madagascar is a paradise place to observe different types of snakes true wonders of nature There are no species of serpents dangerous to humans Because of their teeth the most poisonous snake s endemic to Madagascar only make the victims of the size of the mouse But this exception does not have to be a clearance to get too close because some of these reptiles can be aggressive in case of proven threat The smallest chameleons in the world family Chamaeleonidae belong to the genus Brookesia Gray 1864 and are endemic to Madagascar They are among the smallest species of reptiles in the world the largest species Brookesia perarmata not exceeding 11 cm including tail and the smallest Brookesia minima measuring only 3 cm They are territorial and solitary and feed on small insects Unfortunately this is a montage The real Satanic leaf tailed Gecko The island of Madagascar also called the Republic of Madagascar is an island state separated from the African continent by the Mozambique Channel 1 580 kilometers long and 580 kilometers wide its territory covers a little less than 600 000 km² making it the fifth largest island on the planet
