The Age Of Realism

Barbara Czarniawska-Joerges

The Age Of Realism:

The Age of Realism Frederick William John Hemmings, Giovanni Carsaniga, 1974 Writing Management Barbara Czarniawska-Joerges, 1999 Barbara Czarniawska is one of the most original of contemporary writers on organizations. Sceptical of scientific claims and explanations of the social world she advocates an approach that draws on narrative literary theory, cultural studies and anthropology rather than positivist social science, arguing that the social sciences are a system of institutionalized reflection whereas business and public organizations represent institutionalized action. Recognizing the spread and influence of management studies and management writing, Czarniawska poses the question of what written form this institutionalized reflection might take. She reviews some key organizational texts to show how the art of persuasion as opposed to the presentation of facts can be deployed. In Writing Management Barbara Czarniawska explores a number of the related issues and reflects on the growth and claims of management studies. She writes about the relationship between facts and metaphors, stories and data, and how these may be represented in genres ranging from scientific reports to belles lettres. This provocative and engaging perspective on organizations and organization studies will be vital reading for anybody who is part of either.

Theory of Seeing Wladyslaw Strzemiński, 2025-09-09 The first English translation of a radical and influential theory of art by a leader of Poland's avant garde. After World War II, socialist realism became the official state doctrine of art in Poland, with abstract works deemed counterrevolutionary and forbidden from public view. Władysław Strzemiński, a leader of the Polish constructivist avant garde, developed a treatise of visual consciousness as a foundation for progressive art, emphasizing art's autonomy. His application of Marxist aesthetics to the physiology of seeing is expressed in Theory of Seeing, which was published posthumously in 1958 by his students from notes collected from his lectures. Preceding the comparable perspectives developed by Jacques Rancière, David Hockney, and John Berger, and even the cinema of Jean-Luc Godard, Strzemiński's Theory of Seeing introduces the radical and groundbreaking ideas of one of Poland's most important artists to English-speaking audiences for the first time.

English Literature William Joseph Long, 1912 Handbook of the American Novel of the Nineteenth Century Christine Gerhardt, 2018-06-11 This handbook offers students and researchers a compact introduction to the nineteenth-century American novel in the light of current debates, theoretical concepts, and critical methodologies. The volume turns to the nineteenth century as a formative era in American literary history, a time that saw both the rise of the novel as a genre and the emergence of an independent, confident American culture. A broad range of concise essays by European and American scholars demonstrates how some of America's most well-known and influential novels responded to and participated in the radical transformations that characterized American culture between the early republic and the age of imperial expansion. Part I consists of 7 systematic essays on key historical and critical frameworks, including debates about race and citizenship, transnationalism, environmentalism, and print culture, as well as sentimentalism, romance, and the gothic, realism, and naturalism. Part II provides 22 essays on individual novels, each combining an
