When the Council of the Cunningham Lecture ship did me the honour of inviting me to be the Lecturer for 1920 leaving the choice of a subject to myself I gratefully accepted the appointment and offered a course on the life and writings of Jeremiah Had I been younger I should have preferred instead of adding another to the many books on Jeremiah which have recently appeared in English to try and break ground in some less frequented field of Old Testament theology As it was my choice was influenced by a long standing interest in the study of Jeremiah s work and personality as well as a hope that I might still be able to contribute something to an understanding of his message to his own age and to us The Lectures were delivered under the same title as the present volume in New College Edinburgh in the spring of 1920 and are now published in accordance with the terms of the Lectureship I have to express my regret that publication has been unavoidably delayed beyond the allotted period and also to explain that in preparing the work for the press I have not only expanded the lectures but arranged the matter under other headings and in a somewhat different order In general however the substance of the six original lectures will be found in Chapters I and II III and IV VIII VI and VII XI XV and XVIII The remaining nine chapters are added in order to present a fuller picture of Jeremiah though still an incomplete one than was possible in the lectures

Sefer Yirmiyahu, 1970

Jeremiah's New Covenant Joshua N. Moon, 2011-06-30 The struggle to read Jeremiah 31 31 34 as Christian Scripture has a long and divided history cutting across nearly every major locus of Christian theology Yet little has been done either to examine closely the varieties of interpretation in the Christian tradition from the post Nicene period to the modern era or to make use of such interpretations as helpful interlocutors This work begins with Augustine s interpretation of Jer 31 31 34 as an absolute contrast between unbelief and faith rather than the now standard reading found in Jerome of a contrast between two successive religio historical eras one that governed Israel the old covenant and a new era and its covenant inaugurated in the coming of Christ Augustine s absolute contrast loosened the strict temporal concern so that the faithful of any era were members of the new covenant The study traces Augustine s reading of an absolute contrast in a few key moments of Christian interpretation Thomas Aquinas and high medieval theology then the 16th and 17th century Reformed tradition The thesis aims at a constructive reading of Jer 31 31 34 and so the struggle identified in these moments in the Christian tradition is brought into dialogue with modern critical discussions from Bernhard Duhm to the present Finally the author turns to an exegetical argument for an Augustinian reading of the contrast of the covenants
