Time-Constrained Transaction Management Nandit R. Soparkar, Henry F. Korth, Abraham Silberschatz, 2012-12-06 Transaction processing is an established technique for the concurrent and fault tolerant access of persistent data While this technique has been successful in standard database systems factors such as time critical applications emerging technologies and a re examination of existing systems suggest that the performance functionality and applicability of transactions may be substantially enhanced if temporal considerations are taken into account That is transactions should not only execute in a legal i.e logically correct manner but they should meet certain constraints with regard to their invocation and completion times Typically these logical and temporal constraints are application dependent and we address some fundamental issues for the management of transactions in the presence of such constraints Our model for transaction processing is based on extensions to established models and we briefly outline how logical and temporal constraints may be expressed in it For scheduling the transactions we describe how legal schedules differ from one another in terms of meeting the temporal constraints Existing scheduling mechanisms do not differentiate among legal schedules and are thereby inadequate with regard to meeting temporal constraints This provides the basis for seeking scheduling strategies that attempt to meet the temporal constraints while continuing to produce legal schedules
