Study Guide for Exam 1

Developmental Psychology: the discipline that studies the physical, cognitive, social, and emotional development of humans.

Developmental stages:

1. Developmental periods: broadest of life's stages, identifying major physical and psychological systems and structures that develop during infancy, childhood, adolescence, and adulthood, each marked by key developmental changes and
2. Adult stages: 1st period of growth, development, and maturation in human life, from young adulthood to older adulthood, divided into young adulthood and middle adulthood, with the former marking the end of most physical growth and psychological development, and the latter marking the beginning of physical decline and cognitive decline, both in response to aging processes.
3. Childhood: the period of life's early beginning and differentiation, from birth through to adolescence, marked by rapid physical development, cognitive development, and social development.
4. Infancy: the period of development from birth to the end of the first year of life, marked by rapid physical development and cognitive development, and the beginning of social development.
5. Adolescence: the period of life's early beginning and differentiation, from birth through to adulthood, marked by rapid physical development, cognitive development, and social development.

Developmental research:

1. Longitudinal research: study of individual development over time, by tracking the same individuals over a long period of time, allowing researchers to study the development of individuals over time, and to study the development of individuals over time.
2. Experimental research: study of individual development over time, by tracking the same individuals over a long period of time, allowing researchers to study the development of individuals over time, and to study the development of individuals over time.
3. Correlational research: study of individual development over time, by tracking the same individuals over a long period of time, allowing researchers to study the development of individuals over time, and to study the development of individuals over time.

so distinctive is the unmistakable presence of KATHLEEN STASSEN BERGER on every page in writing that continually draws on the author's teaching and family life to demonstrate a remarkable understanding not just of the field but of students' questions, their concerns, and their lives. The distinctive, definitive BERGER touch is evident throughout her new textbook, Invitation to the Life Span. This brief, original 15-chapter textbook was created from page 1 to address the challenges teachers and students face when covering the entire life span in a semester or even a quarter. The hallmark Berger qualities are all here: the relatable presentation of research, the inclusive approach to world cultures, the study help that builds critical thinking and observational skills, the outstanding media and supplements, and all held together with Berger's skill in bringing students and the science together.

Language Development across the Life Span Birna Arnbjörnsdóttir, Hafþís Ingvarsdóttir, 2017-11-15

This book offers insights from a seven-year study into the impact of English as an International Language at a national level, from the effect of rich English input on a previously monolingual people's linguistic repertoire to its effect on the situated language use demanded of speakers who find themselves in a new linguistic environment for which they have not been prepared. The changes described in the book have occurred in a speech community that identifies strongly with the local language but finds itself increasingly having to use another language to perform daily functions in education and work. Findings describe how the official language and educational policies have not addressed this new linguistic ecology of Iceland. The findings of these studies have larger international, practical, educational, empirical, and theoretical implications and should be relevant to anyone interested in the impact of English as an International Language.
