Content Analysis of Verbal Behavior Louis A. Gottschalk, Fernando Lolas, Linda L. Viney, 2012-12-06 The psychological states of patients with diabetes mellitus were compared with those of patients suffering from other chronic diseases and people with no diagnosed chronic diseases These states were assessed by applying content analysis scales to transcripts of their descriptions of their current experiences Analyses of the diabetics scale scores revealed a pattern characterized by much anxiety depression anger expressed both directly and indirectly together with feelings of helplessness The sources of anxiety which proved to be of most importance to them were fears of death and bodily mutilation as well as guilt and shame They experienced little sense of sharing with most people around them although they showed considerable enjoyment of close relationships with family and friends This pattern of psychological states did not vary with the sex of the patients or whether they were interviewed in a hospital or at home nor with recency of onset or multiplicity of health problems It was similar to the pattern of patients with other chronic diseases but differed significantly from that of the healthy group Acknowledgment The authors wish to acknowledge the contribution of Carol Preston to the collection and analysis of these data which were made available in part by patients of the Wollongong Hospital and members of the Illawarra Branch of the Diabetic Association of New South Wales References 1 Strong JA Baird JD 1971 Diseases of the endocrine system In Davidson S McLeod J eds The principles and practice of medicine The Content Analysis of Verbal Behavior Louis A. Language in Psychotherapy Robert L. Russell, 2013-11-21 This book of original contributions presents investigations of psychotherapeutic interaction While the methodological strategies and the theoretical orientations of these investigations are notably diverse the utterance by utterance analysis of client therapist dialogue provides a strong commonality of interest and a particularly productive perspective from which the process of psychotherapy can be illuminated It is hoped that the contributions selected and the problems with which they are occupied will make evident the rich possibilities such a perspective has to offer It should be noted however that the present volume is not a compendium any effort to be exhaustive would be thwarted by considerations of length alone Thus certain omissions were inevitable It is hoped that the interested reader will use the extensive references to become acquainted with the works not here included Whatever effort I extended as editor and contributor to this volume could not have been undertaken without the lifelong spirit of support of my parents Selma S and Jay F Russell I dedicate my contribution to them

Content Analysis of Verbal Behavior Louis August Gottschalk, 1995 Focusing on language and the assessment of its meaning this volume concentrates on a method of content analysis developed by the author and Goldine Gleser Applicable to transcripts of speech or verbal texts this method uses the grammatical clause as its smallest unit of communication considers whether or not a verb is transitive and involves an object or is intransitive and describes a state of being It derives scores on many scales that have been tested for reliability of scoring and for construct validity with concurrently administered measures such as rating and self report scales as well as biochemical and pharmacological criteria. Finally this volume provides detailed descriptions of the clinical and basic research establishing the validity of these scales so that a reader can locate studies that have pertinence to any special interest area. A major achievement described in this book is the development of computer software that understands grammar and syntax, can parse natural language, knows most of the words in the Merriam Webster dictionary, has been taught to identify idioms and slang, and is capable of continuing to learn. The program can score all the scales, report whether the scores obtained from a verbal sample are one to three standard deviations from the norms, and suggest APA DSM III-R diagnostic classifications the clinician might consider in assessing the patient.
