Talking with Children Amelia Church, Amanda Bateman, 2022 In early childhood education and care ECEC the importance of extended conversations with children is emphasised through professional practice principles i e what teachers should do and in learning outcomes for children i e what children should be able to do Early childhood curricula frameworks or statements of learning goals for young children necessarily respond to the historical educational and political priorities of their communities There is however a universal understanding of the primacy of talk in interaction as both the medium of learning and a skill for children to develop All early childhood curricula reference the fundamental importance of talking with children Early childhood curricula do not however specify how talking with children might be done The deliberate lack of explicit directions on how to talk with children allows teachers to develop pedagogical strategies that incorporate each child s experiences abilities and interests forming a continuum of learning from their home and community environments The flexibility and responsivity of curriculum frameworks for early childhood education frameworks developed and evaluated through national education and care policy enables teachers to create individualized learning for the children and families they work with The fact that early childhood curricula are not prescriptive aligns with a sociocultural approach to education where programs can adapt and respond to the needs of local communities It does mean however that the practices to implement national curricula and enable learning outcomes are less visible to teachers this illusiveness can be problematic as learning outcomes for children are specified in ECEC curricula Teachers know where they are going i e learning goals and why i e professional knowledge beliefs and theory but they are not always sure how to initiate navigate and extend conversations with children throughout this journey
