A. Stear, 2012-12-06 The author's aim in writing this book is to integrate currently available knowledge concerning the basic scientific and technological aspects of breadmaking processes with the diverse breadmaking methods used to manufacture bread in Europe and on the North American continent today To date the main technological advances have been in process mechanization starting with oven development then dough processing or make up equipment followed by continuous and batch mixing techniques from the 1950s to the present time On the engineering side universal emphasis is now being placed on the application of high technology in the form of microprocessors computer controlled equipment and robotization the long term objective being computer integrated manufacture CIM with full automation within the large chain bakery groups in the capitalist countries and the state run collectives of Eastern Europe The application of these key technologies with biotechnology as yet only applied to a limited degree in food manufacture coupled with advances in biochemical and rheological understanding of dough as a biomass for breadmaking should provide us with more expertise and ability to control the processes with greater efficiency The application of fermentable substrates and industrial enzymes under strict kinetic control should contribute to improving the flavour characteristics of bread Current trends towards improving the nutritional contribution of bread to the daily diet are improving the competitive edge of bread as a basic food in the market place

Piqueras-Fizman, Charles Spence, 2016-04-14 Multisensory Flavor Perception From Fundamental Neuroscience Through to the Marketplace provides state of the art coverage of the latest insights from the rapidly expanding world of multisensory flavor research The book highlights the various types of crossmodal interactions such as sound and taste and vision and taste showing their impact on sensory and hedonic perception along with their consumption in the context of food and drink The chapters in this edited volume review the existing literature also explaining the underlying neural and psychological mechanisms which lead to crossmodal perception of flavor The book brings together research which has not been presented before making it the first book in the market to cover the literature of multisensory flavor perception by incorporating the latest in psychophysics and neuroscience Authored by top academics and world leaders in the field Takes readers on a journey from the neurological underpinnings of multisensory flavor perception then presenting insights that can be used by food companies to create better flavor sensations for consumers Offers a wide perspective on multisensory flavor perception an area of rapidly expanding knowledge The Technology of Cake Making A.J. Bent, E.B. Bennion, G.S.T.

Bamford, 2013-03-09 The popularity of the 1973 fifth edition of The Technology of Cake Making has continued in many of the English speaking countries throughout the world This sixth edition has been comprehensively revised and brought up to date with new chapters on Cream butter and milkfat products Lactose Yeast aeration Emulsions and emulsifiers Water activity and Reduced sugar Eggs and egg products Baking fats and lower fat goods The chapters on Sugars Chemical aeration Nuts in confectionery Chocolate Pastries Nutritional value and Packaging have been completely rewritten The increased need for the continuous development of new products does not of necessity mean that new technology has to be constantly introduced Many of the good old favourites may continue to be produced for many years and they form suitable bench marks for new product development The sixth edition introduces the use of relative density to replace specific volume as a measure of the amount of aeration in a cake batter the use of relative density is in line with international agreement Specific volume is kept as a measurement of baked product volume since the industry is comfortable with the concept that subject to an upper limit an increase in specific volume coincides with improvement in cake quality

Chemical Food Safety Leon Brimer, 2011
Chemical food safety deals with all aspects of chemical risks in the food chain predominantly with the biologically active components of food additives contaminants and their toxicology Preventing the contamination of food with problematic chemical compounds requires a thorough understanding of how compounds enter and pass through the food production process in addition to toxicology and risk management Chemical Food Safety covers the underlying principles and applied science required to understand analyse and take professional action on food safety problems and questions that call for interventions at a local national or international level The text follows food contaminants through the production and processing of plant fungal algal and animal foods including oral exposure and intestinal absorption Risk assessment is explained in the context of targeted future risk management and risk communication with a view to assessing managing and communicating risk in the food chain Chemical Food Safety is ideal for higher level students as well as those working in the food production industry consultants and national food authorities
