Taste & smell

Most of our special senses are chemoreception systems: gustation (taste) and olfaction (smell). The degree to which we can respond to taste or olfaction, thereby using smell and taste to monitor the effectiveness of our environment is also an olfactory system. Olfaction is the sense of smell, and taste is the sense of taste. The sense of taste is less discriminatory than the sense of smell, and there is an overlap between taste receptors. The sense of smell is highly discriminatory, with several types of olfactory receptors, each responding to particular odors. Taste receptors are located on the tongue, and olfactory receptors are located in the nasal cavity, just above the mouth. The sense of smell is highly discriminatory, with several types of olfactory receptors, each responding to particular odors. Taste receptors are located on the tongue, and olfactory receptors are located in the nasal cavity, just above the mouth.

Concentrations

Taste receptors vary depending on the concentration of the substance in a given solution or solid. For low concentrations, taste is sweet and salty; moderate concentrations are sour and bitter; and high concentrations are very sour and bitter.

Gustation

Gustation, the sense of taste, gives us information about the food and drink that we consume. Taste buds on the primary gustatory organ, the tongue, contain chemoreceptors called gustatory cells. These taste buds have four basic components: sweet, sour, bitter and salty. A fifth taste, umami, is the taste of glutamate, an amino acid. This taste is associated with proteins, as in aged cheese or meat broth.

The taste bud

Taste buds, structures that produce taste, have taste receptors on the surface of the tongue. The resulting receptor potential sends a signal to the brain via the gustatory nerve. The gustatory nerve is composed of the gustatory cells of the tongue. The gustatory cells are located on the tongue, and the gustatory nerve is composed of the gustatory cells of the tongue. The gustatory cells are located on the tongue, and the gustatory nerve is composed of the gustatory cells of the tongue.

Olfaction

The sense of smell is called olfaction, or the detection of odors. Olfaction depends on specialized chemical receptors, or chemoreceptors, located within the olfactory epithelium. These receptors are designed to respond to small amounts of an odorant, a molecule that can be smelled. The brain interprets the input from several different receptors to identify a particular odor. Humans can detect about 10,000 odors.

As air flows through the nose, the odors across the nasal cavity pass through the olfactory epithelium, bringing odorous molecules into contact with the olfactory nerve. Binding between the ability to detect odors by increasing the volume of air inhaled, which can increase the number of receptors.

Olfactory receptors

Olfactory receptors

Olfactory receptors in the nasal cavity are located in the olfactory epithelium. The olfactory epithelium is a specialized tissue that contains the olfactory receptors. The olfactory receptors are located in the olfactory epithelium, and the olfactory nerve is composed of the olfactory cells of the olfactory epithelium. The olfactory cells are located in the olfactory epithelium, and the olfactory nerve is composed of the olfactory cells of the olfactory epithelium.

Compound sweet and salty tastes, we are left with more receptors to detect umami and about 1,000 taste buds are located on the tongue. The taste buds are located on the tongue, and the taste buds are located on the tongue. The taste buds are located on the tongue, and the taste buds are located on the tongue.

The synapse

Neurons communicate with other cells at a synapse, the site of a nerve impulse transmission. The space between the presynaptic, or sending, neuron and the postsynaptic, or receiving, cell is called the synaptic cleft. An impulse enters at the tip of the axon, the terminal button, where "messenger" molecules called neurotransmitters. These highly specialized chemicals carry nerve impulses from the presynaptic cell to the postsynaptic cell. The postsynaptic cell has receptors that bind with the neurotransmitter, which then triggers an action potential in the target cell.

Renowned experts in their fields of research have contributed their findings to this topical update on chemosensory disorders and made this volume indispensable reading for otorhinolaryngologists and neurologists Tasting and Smelling Gary K. Beauchamp, Linda Bartoshuk, 1997-09-05 Tasting and Smelling presents a comprehensive overview to research on these two important modes of perception The book offers a review of research findings on the biophysics neurophysiology and psychophysics of both senses as well as discussing the emotional component associated with taste and smell and clinical disorders affecting each of these two senses Tasting and Smelling answers how odors and flavors are perceived why we have favorites and what happens when our senses go awry This book is of interest to the researcher in perception cognition or neurophysiology Navigating Smell and Taste Disorders Dr. Ronald DeVere, MD, Marjorie Calvert, 2010-08-03 Demos Health and the American Academy of Neurology Present a New Book for Patients with Smell and Taste Disorders Over 200 000 people visit doctors each year for smell and taste problems Since our ability to smell and taste decreases with age up to 14 million Americans aged 55 and older may live with these disorders undiagnosed Smell and taste disorders affect a person's ability to enjoy food and drink and may result in decreased appetite weight loss and too much added sugar and salt in the diet In severe cases they may lead to depression Smell and taste problems can also interfere with personal safety limiting the ability to notice smoke and potentially harmful chemicals and gases Navigating Smell and Taste Disorders is a unique collaboration between a doctor and a food consultant that both addresses the subject of smell and taste loss and provides food preparation tips and a special recipe section that will appeal to other senses and make food attractive again This is a must have reference book for all those living with smell and taste disorders The book covers the whole disorder including How smell and taste work Causes of smell and taste problems Treatments What you can expect when you visit a specialist Recipes that will appeal to other senses and make food attractive again First person accounts of coping with this disorder Navigating Smell and Taste Disorders is the inaugural book in the series Neurology Now Books from the American Academy of Neurology Inspired by Neurology Now the AAN's leading neurologic patient information magazine Neurology Now Books are written from a multidisciplinary approach combining the expertise of a neurologist with other related experts and patients and caregivers Each volume will provide the reader with the most up to date information answers to questions and concerns and first person accounts of others who are living with a neurologic disorder Flavor, Taste, and the Psychology of Smell Warren Gorman, 1964 Trek Learns about Taste and Smell Felicia Law, 2010 Join Trek and his friends as they explore taste and smell Head and Neck Enrico Marani, Ciska Heida, 2018-11-02 This book offers a critical review of the head and neck from an anatomical physiological and clinical perspective It begins by providing essential anatomical and physiological information then discusses historical and current views on specific aspects in subsequent chapters For example the anatomy of the skull cap or cranial vault provided in the first chapter is discussed in the context of malformation and identity as well as the development of the bony skull in the following chapters. These chapters provide stepping stones to guide readers through the book. There are new fields of research and technological developments in which Anatomy and Physiology lose track of progress. One of the examples discussed is the automated face recognition. In some respects e.g. when it comes to cancers and malformations our understanding of the head and neck and the resulting therapeutic outcomes have been extremely disappointing. In others such as injuries following car accidents there have been significant advances in our understanding of head and neck dysfunctions and their treatment. Therefore head movements also during sleep and head and neck reflexes are discussed. The book makes unequivocal distinctions between correct and incorrect assumptions and provides a critical review of alternative clinical methods for head and neck dysfunctions such as physiotherapy and lymphatic drainage for cancers. Moreover it discusses the consequences of various therapeutic measures for physiological and biomechanical conditions as well as puberty and aging. Lastly it addresses important biomedical engineering developments for hearing e.g. cochlear implants and for applying vestibular/cerebellar effects for vision.

Taste, Smell, and the Elderly, 1992. The Human Sense of Smell David G. Laing, Richard L. Doty, Winrich Breipohl, 2012-12-06. Often being vastly underrated the human sense of smell plays an essential role in our life e.g. in food acceptance, fragrance appreciation and as a warning device for spoiled food, toxic gases and the presence of fire. The book provides a multidisciplinary up-to-date review of the structure and function of the sense of smell and of how it is influenced by the environment and diseases. It is divided into the following 5 sections: Anatomy, Physiology and Chemistry, Measurement of Olfactory Responses, Development and Senescence, Basic Characteristics of Human Olfaction, Clinical and Health Aspects of Olfaction. Taste and Smell, 19??
