The Project Science scheme is a must for any teacher of 7-11 year olds. Written to match the National Curriculum and QCA schemes of work, the books contain attractively laid out photocopiable sheets and easy-to-use teachers' notes. Everything you need to teach science successfully. The team of authors includes science specialists, primary school and special needs teachers. They have worked together to produce material that is clearly written, scientifically accurate, and which primary school pupils will enjoy. Life Processes and Living Things contains over 60 photocopiable sheets. The teachers' notes give background information, ideas for extensions, answers to pupil pages, resources needed, and teaching safety notes. Topics covered include life processes, humans, and other animals, green plants, variation, and classification, and living things in their environment.

Basic Biology Questions for GCSE Chris Rouan, 1994

Living things, their environment, and basic organisation. Life processes: Reproduction, Cells, Organisms affecting humans. Life Processes and Living Things, 1998. A series of programmes putting biological concepts in context.

Q Science: Marilyn Badman, 1992. One of a series comprising pupil, teacher, and assessment resources covering all four Key Stages of the National Curriculum for science. This volume covers plant and animal organ systems and basic life processes with discussion of human health, nutrition, nature, growing up, and relationships.
