Ethics in Design and Communication Laura Scherling, Andrew DeRosa, 2020-02-20 This timely collection brings together critical analytic historical and practical studies to address what ethics means in the practice of design Designers face the same challenges as everyone else in the complex conditions of contemporary cultural life choices about consumption waste exploitation ecological damage and political problems built into the supply chains on which the global systems of inequity currently balance precariously But designers face the additional dilemma that their paid work is often entangled with promoting the same systems such critical approaches seek to redress how to reconcile this contradiction among others in seeking to chart an ethical course of action while still functioning effectively in the world Ethics in Design and Communication acknowledges the complexity of this subject matter while also demonstrating that in the ongoing struggle towards an equitable and sustainable world the talents of design and critical thought are essential Featured case studies include graphic design internships today the dark web and media coverage of the 2016 US presidential election The fact that within this book such a wide array of practitioners scholars critics and professionals commit to addressing current injustices is already a positive sign Nonetheless it is essential that we guard against confusing the coercive force of moral imperatives with ethical deliberation when conceiving a foundation for action

Understanding Social Signals: How Do We Recognize the Intentions of Others? Sebastian Loth, Jan P. De Ruiter, 2016-05-30 Powerful and economic sensors

such as high definition cameras and corresponding recognition software have become readily available e.g. for face and motion recognition. However, designing user interfaces for robots, phones and computers that facilitate a seamless, intuitive and apparently effortless communication as between humans is still highly challenging. This has shifted the focus from developing ever faster and higher resolution sensors to interpreting available sensor data for understanding social signals and recognising users' intentions. Psychologists, Ethnologists, Linguists and Sociologists have investigated social behaviour in human-human interaction. But their findings are rarely applied in the human-robot interaction domain. Instead, robot designers tend to rely on either proof of concept or machine learning based methods. In proving the concept, developers effectively demonstrate that users are able to adapt to robots deployed in the public space. Typically, an initial period of collecting human-robot interaction data is used for identifying frequently occurring problems. These are then addressed by adjusting the interaction policies on the basis of the collected data. However, the updated policies are strongly biased by the initial design of the robot and might not reflect natural, spontaneous user behaviour. In the machine learning approach, learning algorithms are used for finding a mapping between the sensor data space and a hypothesised or estimated set of intentions. However, this brute force approach ignores the possibility that some signals or modalities are superfluous or even disruptive in intention recognition. Furthermore, this method is very sensitive to peculiarities of the training data. In sum, both methods cannot reliably support natural interaction as they crucially depend on an accurate model of human intention recognition. Therefore, approaches to social robotics from engineers and computer scientists urgently have to be informed by studies of intention recognition in natural human-human communication. Combining the investigation of natural human behaviour and the design of computer and robot interfaces can significantly improve the usability of modern technology. For example, robots will be easier to use by a broad public if they can interpret the social signals that users spontaneously produce for conveying their intentions anyway. By correctly identifying and even anticipating the user's intention, the user will perceive that the system truly understands her/his needs. Vice versa, if a robot produces socially appropriate signals, it will be easier for its users to understand the robot's intentions. Furthermore, studying natural behaviour as a basis for controlling robots and other devices results in greater robustness, responsiveness and approachability. Thus, we welcome submissions that: a) investigate how relevant social signals can be identified in human behaviour; b) investigate the meaning of social signals in a specific context or task; c) identify the minimal set of intentions for describing a context or task; d) demonstrate how insights from the analysis of social behaviour can improve a robot's capabilities; or e) demonstrate how a robot can make itself more understandable to the user by producing more human-like social signals.

Landscape Architecture as Storytelling

Bob Scarfo, 2022-11-30. This book introduces students, practitioners and laypeople to a comfortable approach to learning landscape architectural design, free of design jargon and derived from their existing knowledge. A step-by-step process has readers consider their knowledge of language as metaphorically related to basic design and landscape design. Through information delivery and questioning processes readers build on what they already know their tacit understanding of language as applied to problem solving and storytelling Everyone is a storyteller Taken one step at a time through a three tiered analogy of language basic design and landscape design readers learn the makeup and role of such design features as points lines planes volumes and sequential volumetric spaces that make up their worlds With that in a sense new world view and numerous questions and examples readers begin to see that they in fact daily read the environments in which they live work play raise families and grow old Once they realize how they read their surroundings they are helped to recognize that they can build narratives into their surroundings At that point the existence of authored landscape narratives finds readers understanding a design process that relies on the designer as author landscape as text and participant user as reader That process has the reader write a first or second person narrative visually interpret the written narrative into a storyboard and turn the storyboard into a final design the physical makeup of which is read by those who participate in it
