dismantles the notion of truly controlling people. If not in their actions, surely in their minds and reflected in their attitudes, people resent being told what to do. They much prefer to be told why something must be done and then allowed to apply their unique talents and strengths to manage the assignment. Leaders who understand and therefore respect individual differences use diversity to create value, allowing the insights of others to create often superior approaches. This story could have taken place in a hospital, school, supermarket, or any other organization that requires people to work together for the greater good. Regardless of the setting, be it computer service, healthcare, education, manufacturing, or child care, what follows could just as well be your story. Any group of people facing another day just like yesterday can choose to follow this path regardless of the style or color of shoes they wear. True opportunity is one size fits all.

Penny and the Magic Medallion

James R. Shaw, Joseph Robinette, 1987. Who discovered America? Columbus? Well, maybe not. This colorful play, performed by a commedia-like troupe, gives audiences a chance to learn some pre-history about America and maybe learn who really set foot in America first. The play begins with two children stepping across the Bering Straits 20,000 years ago. From there, we watch them survive, become hunters, fishers, and farmers. Then along come the robbers, newscasters, salesmen, etc., to bring in more humor and action to keep young audiences entertained. Joseph Robinette, one of America's best-known children's theatre authors, has written this delightful play with an open theatre approach. Basic modern costumes may be used; the props consist of just a few cubes or boxes, making the play ideal for touring from back cover.
