

Carolyn Miller's Sportacular Warmups Book Two

Foreword

The purpose of this series is to increase the student's technical ability. Each book contains material designed to strengthen fingers, increase flexibility, and help the student master the many technical skills needed to perform. Sportacular Warmups combines sports and music. Students can relate the musical exercise to a similar activity in the five sport areas. At the end of each section there is a solo that is made up of exercises from that section. This is a wonderful review.

I hope your students will enjoy Sportacular Warmups and will become "Sportacular" pianists!

Research suggests that moderate to high intensity dynamic warm up exercises can enhance the excitability of the fast twitch muscle fibers through Post Activation Potentiation PAP and prime them to play a greater role during jumping and sprinting The purpose of this study was to determine if VertiMax jumps executed at the end of a normal dynamic exercise warm up will significantly improve short term athletic performance Twenty participants were randomly placed in one of 5 groups for the duration of the study The subjects performed one of the following warm ups determined by random selection dynamic warm up DW or a dynamic warm up plus VertiMax jumps DWV On Day 2 all the subjects participated in the opposite warm up routine then what they performed on Day 1 Each session concluded with vertical jump and lane agility testing No significant difference from DW to DWV for vertical jump was found $t = 19.1242$ $p = .05$ No significant difference from DWLA to DWVLA was found $t = 19.1082$ $p = .05$ The mean on the DWVVERT was 26.13 inches $sd = 4.37$ and the mean on the DWVERT was 25.83 inches $sd = 4.55$ The mean on the DWVLA was 11.03 seconds $sd = .77$ and the mean on the DWLA was 11.13 seconds $sd = .65$ It was concluded that a warm up that includes a high intensity activity at the end of a dynamic warm up does not improve vertical jump or agility greater than dynamic warm up alone
