

CH 1: The Sociological Perspective sociological perspective: stresses the social context in which people live, and examines how they influence people's lives social location: group memberships people have because of their location in history and society our current reality has two aspects:

1. being part of a global network
2. having unique experiences in our smaller corners of life

SOCIOLOGY: the study of society and human behavior social sciences: examine human relationships further divided into fields: anthropology, economics, political science, psychology, sociology

- each has specialized fields

sociology focuses on external factors that affect the individual goals:

1. explain why things happen
2. make generalizations (apply to broader group)
3. predict by using patterns

Origins of Sociology:

- ancient people tried to figure out how life works by questioning
- sociology emerged in the 1800s, when social observers began using scientific method
- Industrial revolution, life transitioned from agriculture to crowded cities and factory work, people faced difficulty and could no longer count on tradition to answer questions
- political revolution, swept away existing social orders, challenging tradition even further
- imperialism, empire building; Europe conquered many countries and were exposed to very different ways of life
- traditional answers failed to answer new questions, so the scientific method was applied to social life and sociology was born as a new science

Auguste Comte (1788 - 1857): founded sociology, used positivism (application of scientific approach to social world)

study of society

idea: sociologists would reform society, making it a better place

Herbert Spencer: known as second founder, but disagreed with Auguste

- said sociologists should not guide social reform
- fittest should survive to produce more advanced society
- borrowed ideas from Charles Darwin, so this is called social Darwinism

Karl Marx (1818 - 1883): influenced sociology and left his mark on world history

- believed engine of human history is class conflict

1. bourgeoisie (own means of production)
2. proletariat (exploited workers)

- proposed that they will unite and there would be a revolution
