1977) and, more importantly, studies (e.g. de Wit 1980) have shown that, in general, the effects of temperature on the growth of plants are not linear. In fact, the relationship between temperature and growth rate is often sigmoidal, with growth rate increasing rapidly with temperature up to a certain point, after which it levels off or even decreases. This non-linear relationship is important to consider when interpreting the results of the present study, as it suggests that the effects of temperature on growth rate may be more complex than a simple linear relationship.
