Mayer-Thurman,June Wayne,2010 Published in conjunction with an exhibition organized and presented at the Art Institute of Chicago from November 3 2010 to February 7 2011 My art, my story Parker Johnson,2020 Everybody has a story That story formed by many unique experiences shapes who we are Sometimes it s exciting to share those stories and experiences with other people but sometimes they are too painful or frightening to remember Sometimes sharing those stories is difficult because we don t know what to say or how to say it For a refugee getting someone to understand their story or background can be even more challenging because of language barriers That s where art comes in Art is an incredible medium a sort of universal language if you will Art allows its creators to transcend barriers erected by language and culture so it can be one of the most meaningful ways to communicate between different groups of people There s something special about art no words or speech are required but somehow a specific combination of colors and patterns in a painting or drawing can have a profound emotional effect on its viewers And this incredible poignancy can be captured in any piece of art no matter the age or experience of its creator Children make up an incredibly significant part of both the global and local refugee populations nearly half and as such should have their stories told But they can too easily be dismissed as silly or naive Though smaller in stature the voices of children can be bolder and more compelling than those of adults but the first step is providing a platform for them to tell their stories Art can do just that My Art My Story wasn t slated to look like this Initially planned for April of 2020 this project was going to be a show of youth refugee art except in person held in the rotunda of the Iowa State

Capitol But with difficulties meeting with students this spring and restrictions surrounding large gatherings due to COVID 19 a new plan was hatched With the help of Des Moines Refugee Support a face masked art party was held at Evelyn K Davis Park The works created by the students at that event have become the subject of this online exhibition Each piece began as an outline of Iowa traced on an otherwise blank canvas The students were given a choice of markers colored pencils and paints which they used to decorate their canvas however they chose As you may notice each work of art is accompanied by a handful of questions When the artists got close to finishing an adult volunteer would check in with each of them and ask some iteration of five personal questions Though they may seem simple the questions are an opportunity for the kids to tell a bit about themselves in essence emphasizing the importance of the artist behind each canvas Both aspects of this project the artwork and the questions when viewed together allow young refugees to show their brilliance and creativity through their own works and words thus the name of this project from myartmystory org
