

Linking Words (Conjunctions & Conjunctive Adverbs)

Linking words are used to join two words, phrases, clauses or sentences.

Linking words, also known as connecting words, form a relationship between the two parts.

There are two types of linking words:

conjunctions
conjunctive adverbs

Learn how to use linking words in a sentence &

Coordinating conjunctions join parts of sentences with equal importance, i.e.

a word and a word
a phrase and a phrase
a clause and a clause

using these seven conjunctions:

and / and / but / or / yet / so

Subordinating conjunctions join a main clause and a subordinate clause, e.g.

We walked to the park when we found great space to play.

main clause

subordinate clause

Conjunctive adverbs form a relationship between two main clauses or two sentences, e.g.

I like chocolate. However, my brother hates it.

Insert a full stop (.) or semi-colon (;) in front of the conjunctive adverb.

and place a comma (,) after the conjunctive adverb.

Conjunctive adverbs differ from conjunctions in that they are free to move around in a sentence, e.g.

I like chocolate. However, my brother hates it.

I like chocolate. My brother however hates it.

I like chocolate. My brother hates it. However.

VOCABULARY CHECK

conjunction: an word or phrase that connects words or sentences conjunctive adverb: a word that connects two main clauses or two sentences coordinating conjunction: a word that connects two words, phrases, clauses or sentences of equal importance subordinating conjunction: a word that connects a main clause and a subordinate clause
