

Stargazing

SPACE EXPLORATION is the greatest scientific adventure of all. In the 1950s, after centuries of stargazing, scientists took a leap into the sky. They sent the first satellite into orbit. Soon, space probes and human flights were revealing more and more about the Moon, planets and stars.

1 Galileo's discoveries

In 1609, Italian astronomer Galileo pointed his telescope at the night sky. He discovered that the Moon's surface was covered with craters and mountains and was the first to see clearly the separate stars of the Milky Way.

2 Dione by mirrors

Galileo's telescope used lenses. But a century later, Newton designed an optical telescope in which light rays enter through a lens at the front and are reflected back out through a lens at the rear.

3 On a stand

The telescope's view from mirrors is reflected back through the eyepiece. To make it easier to use, it is often mounted on a tripod stand that allows the user to follow objects in the sky as they move across the Earth's surface.

4 Dished up

Before it is too late, these huge radio telescopes are being built all over the world. They are not optical telescopes, they pick up signals from distant stars and other objects in space. They can detect very distant stars and planets, such as our neighbours that would stay far away from us if we could see them.

5 The Hubble Space Telescope

This telescope orbits the Earth. Because it is above the Earth's atmosphere, it is more useful than ground-based telescopes.

Spaces of Geographical Thought Paul Cloke, Ron Johnston, Ronald John Johnston, 2005-02-16 Spaces of Geographical Thought examines key ideas like space and place which inform the geographic imagination. The text explains the significance of these binaries in the constitution of geographic thought and shows how many of these binaries have been interrogated and reimagined in more recent geographical thinking. A consideration of these binaries will define the concepts and situate students in the most current geographical arguments and debates. The text will be required reading for all modules on the philosophy of geography and on geographical theory. The Routledge Handbook of Sensory Archaeology Robin Skeates, Jo Day, 2019-10-28 Edited by two pioneers in the field of sensory archaeology, this Handbook comprises a key point of reference for the ever expanding field of sensory archaeology, one that surpasses previous books in this field both in scope and critical intent. This Handbook provides an extensive set of specially commissioned chapters, each of which summarizes and critically reflects on progress made in this dynamic field during the early years of the twenty first century. The authors identify and discuss the key current concepts and debates of sensory archaeology, providing overviews and commentaries on its methods and its place in interdisciplinary sensual culture studies. Through a set of thematic studies, they explore diverse sensorial practices, contexts and materials, and offer a selection of archaeological case studies from different parts of the world. In the light of this, the research methods now being brought into the service of sensory archaeology are re-examined. Of interest to scholars, students and others with an interest in archaeology around the world, this book will be invaluable to archaeologists and is also of relevance to scholars working in disciplines contributing to sensory studies: aesthetics, anthropology, architecture, art history, communication studies, history, including history of science, geography, literary and cultural studies, material culture studies, museology, philosophy, psychology and sociology. Digitally Disrupted Space Anastasia Panori, 2024-02-15 Digitally Disrupted Space: Proximity and New Development Opportunities for Regions and Cities develops an analytical framework of the key structural elements in relation to digital space and its impact on existing spatial interactions at a regional and urban level. It puts forth the argument that digital space is a new form of space acting complementary to existing spatial structures and creating novel interactions between and/or within them. It explores how digital space enhances connected intelligence by combining knowledge-intensive activities, cooperation between organisational and institutional actors, and smart environments of knowledge creation and diffusion. Readers will better understand the connections between digital transformations and traditional paths of regional development, as well as underlying mechanisms fostering externalities and proximity emergence, triggering effective collaboration between the digital and other expressions of space. The first set of chapters, Part I, focuses on space disruptions in a digitalising world The key notions of space and digital space are defined alongside the main concepts that form it in relation to space dynamics space connectors and space routines The following group of chapters Part II discuss aspects related to the digital space reshaping transition processes exploring the role of digital space under the multi level perspective and the digital space in the forefront of twin transition Finally the last three chapters Part III focus on digital space challenges and opportunities for regional development A specific focus is given in three key areas of regional development and the ways in which digital space can enhance them including Productivity Resilience and Inclusion Academics and researchers will find insights into how cities and regions can adopt this new developmental paradigm how to organise connected intelligence within regional and urban environments and how to sustain productivity resilience and inclusion through the use of digital space Digital transformation managers in the public sector and entrepreneurs in private organisations can leverage the opportunities offered from this transition process not only by identifying actions and strategies for boosting their productivity but also for making them more resilient during socio economic environmental and health crises And professionals and policymakers in urban and regional development will find concrete guidance about the design development and management of the digital space and the creation of connected intelligence environments at the urban and regional level Thoroughly analyzes the role of digital space to complement existing structures and generate new interactions and networks revealing the digital elements that are essential for the rise of new dynamics connectors and routines Positions the digital space emergence under the framework of a multi level transition perspective shedding light on how digital space reshapes transition processes Explores the potential challenges and opportunities arising from the emergence of the digital space for regional development

Retailising Space Prof Dr Mattias Kärrholm, 2013-06-28 Over the past few years there has been a proliferation of new kinds of retail space Retail space has cropped up just about everywhere in the urban landscape in libraries workplaces churches and museums In short retail is becoming a more and more manifest part of the public domain The traditional spaces of retail such as city centres and outlying shopping malls are either increasing in size or disappearing producing new urban types and whole environments totally dedicated to retail The creation of these new retail spaces has brought about a re and de territorialisation of urban public space and has also led to transformations in urban design and type of materials used and even in the logic and ways through which these design amenities meet the needs of retailers and or consumers This book describes how the retailisation of public domains affects our everyday life and our use of the built environment Taking an architectural and territorial perspective on this issue it looks specifically at how retail and consumption spaces have changed and territorialised urban life in different ways It then develops a methodology and a set of concepts to describe and understand the role of architecture in these territorial transformations
