The Forest Ranger Herbert Kaufman, 1967 The Administrative Behavior of Federal Bureau Chiefs Herbert Kaufman, 2011-10-01 Most of the people who keep tabs on the workings of the federal government no matter what the reasons for their interest seem to take for granted the power and autonomy of the chiefs of the bureaus that make up the executive branch Because so much is taken for granted there have not been many studies of what the chiefs actually do day by day Of all the participants in the governmental process who wield or are thought to wield great influence bureau chiefs are among the least examined. Believing that he could narrow this gap in the materials on the federal government somewhat Herbert Kaufman set out to report his observations of six bureau chiefs at their jobs in the course of a year. The group consisted of the commissioners of the Internal Revenue Service, the Customs Service, the Food and Drug Administration and the Social Security Administration, the chief of the Forest Service and the administrator of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, a set diversified enough to include a wide variety of organizational situations and experiences yet with enough in common to allow comparison and generalization. The objective of his research was to describe the chief's activities so as to explain how they exercise their power. And he hoped to find out whether they are as powerful as they are said to be. From his efforts emerges a detailed picture of the work of the bureau leaders and of their role in their agencies and in the government generally. The picture reveals that some of the common beliefs about these officials and perhaps about the system as a whole are not altogether accurate. Kaufman traces the implications of his findings for organizing the executive branch for training administrators and for organization theory.

Steelman, 2010 Over the past three decades governments at the local state and federal levels have undertaken a wide range of bold innovations often in partnership with nongovernmental organizations and communities to try to address their environmental and natural resource management tasks. Many of these efforts have failed. Innovations by definition are transitory. How then can we establish new practices that endure? Toddi A. Steelman argues that the key to successful and long-lasting innovation must be a realistic understanding of the challenges that face it. She examines three case studies: land management in Colorado, watershed management in West Virginia, and timber management in New Mexico, and reveals specific patterns of implementation success and failure. Steelman challenges conventional wisdom about the role of individual entrepreneurs in innovative practice. She highlights the institutional obstacles that impede innovation and its longer-term implementation while offering practical insight in how enduring change might be achieved.
