The French Revolution Debate and the British Novel, 1790-1814 Morgan Rooney, 2013 This study examines how debates about history during the French Revolution informed and changed the nature of the British novel between 1790 and 1814 During these years intersections between history political ideology and fiction as well as the various meanings of the term history itself were multiple and far reaching Morgan Rooney elucidates these subtleties clearly and convincingly While political writers of the 1790s Burke Price Mackintosh Paine Godwin Wollstonecraft and others debate the historical meaning of the Glorious Revolution as a prelude to broader ideological arguments about the significance of the past for the present and future novelists engage with this discourse by representing moments of the past or otherwise vying to enlist the authority of history to further a reformist or loyalist agenda Anti Jacobin novelists such as Charles Walker Robert Bisset and Jane West draw on Burkean historical discourse to characterize the reform movement as ignorant of the complex operations of historical accretion For their part reform minded novelists such as Charlotte Smith William Godwin and Maria Edgeworth travesty Burke's tropes and arguments so as to undermine and then redefine the category of history As the Revolution crisis recedes new novel forms such as Edgeworth's regional novel Lady Morgan's national tale and Jane Porter's early historical fiction emerge but historical representation largely the legacy of the 1790s novel remains an increasingly pronounced feature of the genre Whereas the representation of history in the novel Rooney argues is initially used strategically by novelists involved in the Revolution debate it is appropriated in the early nineteenth century by authors such as Edgeworth Morgan and Porter for other often related ideological purposes before ultimately developing into a stable nonpartisan aestheticized feature of the form as practiced by Walter Scott The French Revolution Debate and the British Novel 1790-1814 demonstrates that the transformation of the novel at this fascinating juncture of British political and literary history contributes to the emergence of the historical novel as it was first realized in Scott's Waverley 1814

Committee on Foreign Relations, 1947 Essays on the French Revolution Steven G. Reinhardt, Elisabeth A. Cawthon, 1992 Clarke Garrett examines the differing responses of Catholics and Protestants and the resulting disturbances Roderick Phillips describes the wide variation in provincial response to the revolutionary assembly's family reform measures He traces the different reactions of urban and rural residents to such legal measures as liberalization of divorces secularization of birth death and marriage registrations and inheritance reform Peasants in central France were already engaged in total revolution when Joseph Fouché arrived there in late 1793 Nancy Fitch argues that Fouché was formed by his encounter with indigenous peasant radicalism as much as the peasants were influenced by his rhetoric of a new political culture Donald Sutherland summarizing scholarly debate on the subject argues that in the final analysis the Revolution itself was tragically and profoundly alien to many French men and women in 1789
