STAT 201

Introduction to Programming for Data Science

The Department of Statistics and Data Science has introduced a new course this year which is open to all undergraduates: STAT 201 Introduction to Programming for Data Science.

Programming and, in particular, the use of statistical software to explore data, apply statistical methods, and communicate analyses is a necessary skill set for modern Statisticians and Data Scientists to have. With this in mind, the department has designed STAT 201 as an introduction to programming concepts relating to data science and as a means of providing students with experience in both Python and R (two common languages used to conduct data analyses).

We hope students looking for such an introduction consider enrolling in this course.

- STAT 201 is open to all undergraduate students and does not have any prerequisites.
- STAT 201 will meet MWF 3:00-3:50 PM in winter 2023. STAT 201 will also be offered in spring 2023.
- If you are considering a Data Science major, STAT 201 will fulfill the introductory Computer Science requirement for the major.
- STAT 201 does not currently fulfill any degree requirements for the Statistics major, Statistics minor, or Data Science minor.
- While STAT 201 is considered an equivalent of COMP_SCI 110 and 111 for the Data Science major, students who need to take an introductory Computer Science course as a requirement for another major or minor should plan to take one of the COMP_SCI equivalent courses rather than STAT 201.
- At the present time, STAT 201 will not fulfill any requirements outside of the Department of Statistics and Data Science.

If you have any questions about this course, please contact Deric Holloway (deric.holloway@northwestern.edu)
