Biography and Turning Points in Europe and America Hackstaff, Karla B., Kupferberg, Feiwei, 2012-06-22 This sociological collection advances the argument that the concept of a turning point expands our understanding of life experiences from a descriptive to a deeper and more abstract level of analysis It addresses the conceptual issue of what distinguishes turning points from life transitions in general and raises crucial questions about the application of turning points as a biographical research method Biography and turning points in Europe and America is all the more distinctive and significant due to its broad empirical database The anthology includes authors from ten different countries providing a number of contexts for thinking about how turning points relate to constructions of meaning shaped by globalization and by cultural and structural meanings unique to each country The book will be useful across a wide range of social sciences and particularly valuable for researchers needing a stronger theoretical base for biographical work

Shaping Jazz Damon J. Phillips, 2013-07-21 There are over a million jazz recordings but only a few hundred tunes have been recorded repeatedly Why did a minority of songs become jazz standards Why do some songs and not others get rerecorded by many musicians Shaping Jazz answers this question and more exploring the underappreciated yet crucial roles played by initial production and markets in particular organizations and geography in the development of early twentieth century jazz Damon Phillips considers why places like New York played more important roles as engines of diffusion than as the sources of standards He demonstrates why and when certain geographical references in tune and group titles were considered more desirable He also explains why a place like Berlin which produced jazz abundantly from the 1920s to early 1930s is now on jazz s historical sidelines Phillips shows the key influences of firms in the recording industry including how record companies and their executives affected what music was recorded and why major companies would rerelease recordings under artistic pseudonyms He indicates how a recording s appeal was related to the narrative around its creation and how the identities of its firm and musicians influenced the tune's long run popularity Applying fascinating ideas about market emergence to a music's commercialization Shaping Jazz offers a unique look at the origins of a groundbreaking art form

Transmedia Television M.J. Clarke, 2012-12-20 Faced with what many were calling a dying medium US network television producers became much more aggressive in seeking out alternative business and artistic models in the beginning of this century Most significantly many of these producers turned to the emerging field of transmedia ancillary texts in comicbooks novels and new media as a way to bolster and support television products In this book the author examines four such programs 24 Alias Heroes and Lost and investigates how transmedia was incorporated into both the work and the art of network television production Split into two complementary parts the book first paints a picture of how transmedia producers were or were not incorporated into creative decision making centers of these serialized programs The second section explains how the presence of off site transmedia texts begins to alter the very narrative construction of the on air series themselves Including interviews with the transmedia workers this groundbreaking study extends the field of television studies into brand new areas and brings a dying medium into the 21st Century

Showing and Telling: Film heritage institutes and their performance of public accountability Nico de Klerk, 2019-03-25 Showing and Telling is the first academic work to explore how publicly funded film heritage institutes account for their mandate in their public activities It does that by inspecting and evaluating public presentations and visitor information about these presentations The research was done by juxtaposing two complementary approaches The first is grounded in the author's experience as a collection researcher and curator and makes a case for the richness of archival objects usually ignored for their lack of aesthetic qualities The second is a survey of the public activities of 24 institutes worldwide based on their websites in February 2014 the latter constitutes a unique source This original work uncovers the disconnect between the curatorial activities of these institutes and their missions A central finding is that publicly funded film heritage institutes give their public an inadequate sense of cinema history By and large they offer a mainstream oriented repertoire of presentations overwhelmingly consisting of feature fiction they show a disproportionate amount of recent and new works often through commercial distribution their screenings consist of an unexplained melee of technological formats sometimes substandard and their presentations monotonously frame film as art although their professed aesthetics are mostly of a cinephile nature and rest on received opinion Specific materials early cinema in particular and specialist knowledge both historical and methodological are largely restricted to their network of peer communities Wholesome transfer of full knowledge in word and image to the public is not a major concern Showing and Telling concludes with recommendations for curatorial activities

Firstly with a conceptual apparatus that allows a more complete understanding of film heritage and its histories Secondly with a plea for rethinking the institutes gatekeeper function and for developing more varied imaginative and informative public presentations both on site and online that reflect the range of their collections and their histories Bollywood and its Other(s) V. Kishore,A. Sarwal,P. Patra,2016-01-26 How do we define the globalized cinema and media cultures of Bollywood in an age when it has become part of the cultural diplomacy of an emerging superpower Bollywood and Its Other s explores the aesthetic philosophical questions of the other through for example discussions on Indian diaspora s negotiations with national identity
