What is the ICT Industry?

The information and communications technology (ICT) industry relates to the creation and use of technological based systems within specific ICT related workplaces, as well as supporting the use and maintenance of technology across all other industries. The industry conducts research and generates tools and services which helps aid individuals who work across industries in relation to their workflow and communications.

ICT Specific Workplaces

Specific workplaces within the ICT industry may be related to:

- Research and developing into technology.
- Computer science.
- Software development.
- Project management in the development of new systems for specific workplaces.
- Help desk support and service for users of different technologies.
- Administration and maintenance for supporting technology in workplaces.
- Retail in the selling of ICT related products to customers.

Industries that Use ICT

As stated, ICT is not just an industry of itself, but a foundation industry that develops tools and services that aids all other industries. Some of these industries include:

- Education
- Health
- Business & Finance
- Hospitality
- Retail

These industries are supported by ICT tools which allow them to have an online presence on the internet, communicate with peers and client, share information and conduct business transactions through making online sales.
