Abstract—This work is an approach that brings together Learning Analytics and Ontologies for a data classification that promotes improvements and behavioral changes for students and teachers on e-Learning platforms. Combining training courses, dashboards, user's evaluations, and based on Design Science Research (DSR) methodology, artifacts were created. One of the most important artifacts of our work is the Sapes tool that aims to improve students' perceptions of their learning path and to promote a better teacher overview to follow their students' progress. The results showed high approval by the participating students and teachers, who perceived the Sapes tool as a good facilitator of the teaching-learning process, with possibilities for self-monitoring, dynamization of the learning sequence and better interactivity with colleagues, highlighted as absent in standard e-Learning courses. In addition, the application changed the behavior of users towards the content provided by the teacher, with students performing self-management and self-regulation that were not commonly performed previously.

Keywords—Learning Analytics, ontology, Learning Management System, educational technologies

1 Introduction

With the COVID-19 crisis and the wide-spread adoption of asynchronous teaching methods combined with new information technologies for e-Learning, the ongoing debate on how to evaluate, assess, and measure the knowledge of students in this modality grew and has extended the application of technology-enhanced learning environments that provide opportunities for students to self-regulate their learning processes and activities to better achieve intended learning outcomes, as well as help teachers improve their teaching methods [1]. Commonly in this teaching modality, users, both teachers, and students interact with Learning Management Systems (LMS), usually software for management, documenting, tracking, reporting, automating, and delivering educational courses, to gain access to educational content, interaction with peers

Teacher and Student Perceptions John M. Levine, Margaret C. Wang, 1983 Student Feedback on Teaching in Schools Wolfram Rollett, Hannah Bijlsma, Sebastian Röhl, 2021-08-12 This open access book provides a comprehensive and informative overview of the current state of research about student perceptions of and student feedback on teaching After presentation of a new student feedback process model evidence concerning the validity and reliability of student perceptions of teaching quality is discussed This is followed by an overview of empirical research on the effects of student feedback on teachers and instruction in different contexts as well as on factors promoting the successful implementation of feedback in schools In summary the findings emphasize that student perceptions of teaching quality can be a valid and reliable source of feedback for teachers The effectiveness of student feedback on teaching is significantly related to its use in formative settings and to a positive feedback culture within schools In addition it is argued that the effectiveness of student feedback depends very much on the support for teachers when making use of the feedback As this literature review impressively documents teachers in their work and ultimately students in their learning can benefit substantially from student feedback on teaching in schools This book reviews what we know about student feedback to teachers It is detailed and it is a pleasure to read To have these chapters in one place and from those most up to date with the research literature and doing the research is a gift John Hattie

Teacher and Student Evaluation Alyson Leah Lavigne, Thomas L. Good, 2013-09-05 Following the recent major school reform of Race to the Top schools teachers and students are increasingly evaluated through high stakes achievement test scores In six concise chapters Teacher and Student Evaluation explores the historical rise and modern landscape of accountability in American education and the current models of teacher evaluation The authors provide realistic and useful suggestions for responding to current accountability demands The authors explore the methodological concerns and policy implications of using value added and observational measures to make high stakes decisions After reaching the conclusion that these contemporary evaluation practices are flawed Alyson Lavigne and Thomas Good offer possible solutions that inform current and future teacher evaluation This book is a valuable resource for students of educational assessment as well as policy makers administrators and teachers who are currently building accountability plans The book is written in an accessible but authoritative fashion that practitioners policymakers and scholars will find useful Handbook of
