Technology and Economic Development Edward J. Malecki, 2009 This study examines the effects of technological change on economic growth and development synthesizing extensive research from multiple disciplines including geography and planning regional science entrepreneurship technology policy and economics It uses the framework of regional development to encompass economic dynamics at all spatial scales national regional and local The concept of regional development is introduced as the qualitative or structural features of a region's economy as opposed to its sheer size or growth rate The analysis also examines the core periphery dichotomy where the core is defined as a set of regions in which complexity technology and control are the norm and where linkages to other nodes and the global system are common The discussion also draws a distinction between economic growth and economic development the former designates increases in population within a specific area or increases in the quantity or the value of the goods and services and does not necessarily lead to qualitative improvements in life the way development does Technological capability is closely related to capability in R conventional strategies are changing to encompass people their contacts and skills as another vital basis for success of firms in new technologies and in alliances and other cooperations The location of economic activities is explored There are two major sets of influences on the innovativeness and competitiveness of places 1 technical skills and information are key in the process of technological change and competition and 2 urban areas contain a complex synergy of factors that smaller more remote places cannot attain Producer services which are strongly based on knowledge and symbolic analysis are therefore typically clustered in cities Small firms and entrepreneurship are examined as a crucial part of a well functioning regional economy Research has demonstrated the close relationship between entrepreneurship and regional and local development Innovativeness developed within local inter firm networks both supports existing firms and presents opportunities for starting new businesses in order to serve newly identified markets Networks of firms complement and sometimes substitute for a firm's own technological capability Networks of large firms and the globalization of economic activity are then considered Policy attempts at national regional and local scales to influence the location of economic activity are analyzed The economic progress and prospects of developing countries are assessed Policies for innovation entrepreneurship and the functioning of the economy are essential and require flexibility in order to respond to changing conditions in the world economy in specific product markets and in technology Concludes with a discussion of some of the central themes that were facing society at the end of the 1990s including basic needs for human development environmental issues employment and human capital and infrastructures for future technologies AT The Theory of Technological Change and Economic Growth Stanislaw Gomulka, 2017-08-21 In this wide ranging exposition of the various economic theories of technological change Stanislaw Gomulka relates them to rates of growth experienced by different economies in both the short and the long term Analysis of countries as diverse as Japan the Soviet Union and the United Kingdom demonstrates that there is an interdependence between technological change and the institutional and cultural characteristics of different countries which can have a profound effect on their rates of growth All of the major relevant models are discussed including those of Kuznets and Phelps but throughout the emphasis is on the creation of a unified theoretical framework to help explain the impact of technological progress on both a micro and a macro scale Technological Change in the Modern Economy Paul R. Beije, 1998 Technological Change in the Modern Economy presents an authoritative overview of the economics of technological change Using an empirical foundation it examines the economic causes and effects of technological innovation It also analyzes the process of innovation itself The author first provides an introduction to innovation and technical change He expands this to include issues such as innovation and economic growth the organization of innovation innovation and competition and the role of government He also discusses new topics such as technological cooperation the spillover effects of research the firm as a learning organization and national systems of innovation These issues are analysed empirically employing theoretical explanations to support case studies on Europe The United States and Japan The book uses an institutional economics approach discussing the role of various actors such as individual inventors research departments of private firms and public research institutes The book will provide an introduction to the economics of innovation for advanced undergraduates and for managers and public administrators involved in innovation It will also be of interest to those studying industrial organization and institutional economics and will be accessible to those from business administration and management science Technological Change and Economic Growth Floyd Alden Bond, 1965
